The Case Clearly Stated.

Let the People of West Virginia Ponder!

J. N. CAMDEN, Esq., the Conservative candidate for Governor in this State, is delivering some trenchant blows in a house, but telling way, throughout all the western counties. Recently, at Mason city, Mason county, he delivered an address before an immense Mass Meeting in which he discussed at length all the national issues now pending, in a manner so concise, convincing and logical, as it has been done in any address which we have yet read. He concluded this masterly speech by the following reference to

STATE AFFAIRS.

What has been said in regard to the Radical policy in the Federal Government, with equal force, to our own State. We need a change—a different policy must be pursued before we can prosper. We see every important interest languishing and perishing. No internal improvements are in progress, and none really projected. Our roads and bridges, in many sections, are uncare for and left to decay; our country is neither filling up with population nor improving; our lands are not increasing in value, nor are they sought after, and although we have an efficient Commissioner of Immigration to invite immigrants to homes among us, they come not; and many of our own people are seeking homes in other States. Why is this? Is it not, my friends, on account of high taxes, our complicated system of office holding, and the proscriptive and unfriendly legislation of the party in power?

The hard earnings of the people are swept away by the tax-gatherers, to be divided among useless office holders and squandered upon purposes other than for the development of the material interests of the State. Extravagance, the cost of registration, and general profligate legislation, like a sponge, absorb all the money drawn from the people. If we would correct this, and make wholesome changes, we must forget the animosities, prejudices and ill-feelings that are encouraged and fed by the party in power to promote their own purpose at the expense of the State. Their legislation looks only to party ends. What interest have the people in keeping any party in power, and allowing the best interests of the State to perish from neglect?

What interest have the voters in being made cats-paws, to draw the chestnut from the fire, while the office-seeker stands by ready to pocket them?

I submit to you, Republicans, as well as Conservatives, to say whether your honest judgments are not in favor of a change of the State, bounding in material and mineral wealth. Would it not be better to save the money now uselessly expended, adopt a more liberal policy, and unite as men having a common interest in the welfare of our State in developing it.

The leaders of the Radical party may deal in opprobrious epithets and vindictive denunciations as much as they please, but the fact still remains the same, and will be recognized by the people, that we all have an indivisible interest in our State. We must all prosper together, or become poor, tax-ridden, and neglected together. The days of wealth, descend alike on all; and all alike must share the effects of good or bad government.

Fellow citizens, I was born and raised within our State, and feel I have a common interest with you. I cherish a State pride, and an ardent desire to see every interest in it prosper. We have the comforts of wealth, and if we act as liberal, fair-minded men, aiming to accomplish good results, we can make our young State blossom with prosperity, and take high rank among our sister States. To aid in accomplishing such results would be my highest ambition; and should I be clothed with my energies will be devoted to these ends.

How TO BECOME LOYAL.—Gov. Vance, of North Carolina, in a recent speech, among other good things, got off the following: "Just go for Grant and—lo!—you are loyal. I could make a loyal man out of myself in a few seconds, by simply telegraphing that I would support the Grant and Colfax ticket. My mind would be forgiven and they would tell me to 'depart in peace'—like a buncombe magistrate of my town, the other day. A couple presented themselves before him to be married. He was a pompous sort of ignoramus and was smartly bothered 'how to do it' as a crowd of town boys had collected to see the fun. After he had bawled, whanged, him through and tied them as man and wife there was a kind of pause. The couple didn't know 'it was all over.' So, straightening himself up, one arm a kimbo, 'my friends,' said he, 'depart in peace and sin no more!'

A SCALLAWAG.—The Memphis Avalanche thus pours it into one Hamilton, who is the radical candidate for Congress in that district: "The sugar thief, the white livered perjurer, and the apostate to the Confederate cause, has returned to his loathsome habitation. He is more pestiferous than the lice and locusts of Egypt, than siroccos, tempests, hurricanes and whirlwinds. Smallpox, yellow fever, phthisis, rheumatism and gout are all bad enough; but they are blessings in comparison with the leprous scourge called Hamilton. As no grass ever grew where the feet of the renowned Huns trod the earth, so does the rich carpet that sods the green fields wither and crisp under the blighting tread of Hamilton's cloven hoofs. When he enters a garden, the full-blown flowers all turn to cinders, and hang their heads in mournful shame. The birds hush their matin songs at his approach, and fly away as if some evil genius had poisoned their fragrant bowers. The dogs bark at him with a kind of melancholy howl, and when he approaches a hen yard the chickens caw in a mournful drawl."

Vote for Seymour and Blair if you want to save the country.

Pennsylvania and Ohio.

If Pennsylvania goes Democratic in her State election on the 13th there will be a certainty of Seymour's election, but it must be borne in mind that the majority of October are no sure criterion of the result in November. New York will vote for Seymour in November, and if the indications in October show Democratic gains in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, there will be but little doubt of the election of Mr. Seymour, even should Pennsylvania go against the Democrats in October by a reduced majority. To show the fluctuations which may take place between October 13th and November 3d we would refer to the elections of 1866. In that year, although Maine went against the Democrats by 24,500 majority, Pennsylvania in October went Democratic by 2,775, and in November swelled that majority to 83,200. The reasons was that the October elections involved local issues and the November election involved national issues. Although last year the Democrats carried Pennsylvania by 900 majority, there were 60,000 who did not vote. Of this number 40,000 were Republicans and 20,000 Democrats. The Republicans, therefore, had really a majority of 20,000. In order to carry Pennsylvania it will be necessary for the Democrats to make a change of 10,000 Republican votes, that is to say a change of two per cent. upon the aggregate vote. The aggregate vote of Pennsylvania is 595,000. A change of two per cent. will take 11,910 votes from the Republican side and place them on the Democratic. Cannot a change of two per cent. upon the aggregate vote in Pennsylvania be made? Maine gave us a change of four per cent.—The argument is stronger in Pennsylvania than in Maine. Instead of a change of two per cent., we will expect a change of six per cent., that is to say 35,700 from the Radicals to the Democrats. This would give the Democracy 250,000 majority. A change of four per cent., as in Maine, will give the Democracy 238,000 votes from the Radical side and a clear majority of nearly 140,000.

The same is true of Ohio. Last year upon the largest vote ever polled, the State went Radical by only 3,000 majority. A change of two per cent. on the aggregate vote of 494,227 would be a change of 9,884 from the Radical side to the Democratic. A change of four per cent., as in Maine, would be a Democratic gain of 19,368 or a clear majority of 10,000. But supposing that Ohio was influenced last year by local issues, let us go back to the election of 1866 and see what a change of four per cent. will do. Letting the aggregate vote remain the same, we find that in 1866 the Radicals had 30,000 majority. A change of 15,000 from one side to the other would balance the vote. But a change of four per cent., as in Maine, would bring 19,368 from one side and add it to the other.

If the Western States do not do better than Maine all of the indications are that if they do so well as Maine, we have got the Radicals by the hip.

HUBRA FOR SEYMOUR AND BLAIR!

Ex Attorney General Stanbery addressed a Democratic meeting in Lancaster, Ohio, on Saturday week. His speech was mainly devoted to an argument against the Congressional plan of reconstruction, and he said that he had made up his mind to oppose these revolutionary measures. In conclusion he spoke as follows: "And now as to the question, 'How can the Democratic Conservative party apply a remedy?' There are some who say the evil is incurable; that right or wrong, the blackness of the South, has become a permanent stain. Next, elect a Democratic House of Representatives, and half the work is done; for not a Representative from one of these reconstructed States will be recognized, and not another dollar will be appropriated to sustain the Freedman's Bureau, or the military occupation of the South. Finally, put a Democratic majority in the Senate, and then the good work will be completed. It will take time, perhaps, more than it has taken to do the mischief. The process may be slow one; but, my Democratic friends, if you are of the same class of men as the Democracy of old—if you possess the same steadfast, unconquerable will, sooner or later success is sure.

A young gentleman, residing in Culpeper county, recently caught a catfish weighing four and a half pounds. Inside the fish was found a gold badge about the size of an old fashioned silver dollar, which had inscribed on it 'Major R. B. Stanley, Sixth Army Corps, U. S.'

Senator Henderson.

A Strong Indictment Against the Radical Party.

Senator Henderson, of Missouri, made a speech on Tuesday afternoon in the court room at Bowling Green, Missouri. The court room was pretty well filled, containing some three hundred persons, a large majority of whom were Democrats.

There was much in his speech that we heartily approved. His arraignment of the Radical party for its bad legislation was very just and true. He showed that the legislation of the party in power for the past few years was disastrous to the best interests of the country. His expose of the impeachment faces was able and cutting and his denunciation of Butler very severe but not underrating. He denounced him as a coward; a liar, and a thief, and seventy times meaner than Danton of the bloody French revolution.

The action of Congress in spending time in sending out committees to manufacture falsehoods, at the expense of millions of dollars to the people, received a cutting and merited rebuke. He said that Butler was a member of the Republican party, he was not. He said impeachment was the most damnable crime ever attempted since the detronement and death of Charles I. and had succeeded the action of Oliver Cromwell's day would have been repeated in this country. His review of the trial of the President was scathing, and said in his twenty years experience at the bar he had never witnessed such a contemptible farce. And he gave notice to Radical candidates that he wanted them all to understand that the man who assailed his vote for the acquittal of the President could not get his vote. "For," said he, "he who does it is dishonest and a liar." In casting that vote he had done "justice," and if the Republican party is to be injured by doing justice it ought to do more.

He reviewed at some length the test oath and registration law of this State, and said they ought to be repealed. He said disfranchisement in the time of peace was the essence of tyranny. He was for burying the hatchet, and he who was opposed to it should leave the State. He maintained that every man should be considered innocent until proven guilty by competent testimony. He said the Supreme Court of the United States had decided the test oath ex post facto, and urged that the Radicals should humbly acknowledge that they had done wrong, and nominate men pledged to repeal all odious and proscriptive measures and let every man vote.

[Louisiana (Mo) Journal, Sep. 19.]

A Bloody Scene in Tennessee.

The Nashville Press and Times of the 20th of September, says: "The details of a terrible deed of blood reached us yesterday from Hawkins county. The victim was J. C. Willis, himself the murderer of a man named Sizemore, who fell by a bullet from his pistol, about a year ago, in the same county. Between this Willis and one Barton had been growing for some time, and they thrived for each other's blood. At length the devil favored their wish, and they met on Sunday last on the banks of the Clinch river, a few miles east of Rogersville. Willis was his drunk, and was on his way home from a distillery in the hills, where he had been drinking and gaining for three days. The other man, it is said, was just leaving a religious gathering in the woods. They met in a lonely place; both were mounted. The moment they came in sight of each other, at a short hand in the road, they were not more than twenty yards apart, and their horses were going at a good trot. When they pulled up the animals' heads touched each other. They halted and let their bridles reins drop. Willis' belt came loose, and his pistol fell down on his horse's back. He partially turned to pick it up, and while in this act, his assailant fired and struck Willis in the side. The man fell, and when he came to the ground the horse which he was riding turned and galloped off, dragging him a considerable distance. His foot caught in a projecting root, while the other remained in the stirrup. The violence of the jerk literally wrenched his thigh bone from the socket, while the saddle girth broke, and he was left on the ground groaning. When the enemy rode up and dismounted, Willis saw the evil design in his eye, and begged of him to give him a respite to see his wife. But he would allow no respite—not even to utter a short prayer, but sternly told the man he should die. Willis implored mercy, the blood streaming from his side, and the agony of his torn limb working his face into fearful contortions. He clasped his hands together and begged mercy, but there was none. The monster deliberately put his pistol to the left side of man's forehead, and shot his brains out. He then mounted his horse, and rode to a friend's house, to whom he detailed the particulars of the murder, took three or four drinks of whiskey and left. He has not been heard from since."
