The Radical leader in Sambro in either a fool or scamp. Probably, is a good deal of both.

But Grant's reply was a poser. The papers call it a speech. It occupied just ten newspaper lines, and said nothing, except to hope that the darkies will "by their future conduct prove themselves deserving of all they now claim."

But "there was in all this speech" not the least expression of a belief that the negroes ever will prove anything of the kind. Grant has not yet been educated to have faith in negroes; for belief in negroes has to be acquired—as much so as a love for tobacco.

To acquire this faith in negroes, Grant must undergo a fanatical discipline which would kill him. He would have to give up the use of whisky and tobacco for eighteen months, live on sawdust bread and cold water, and read the Tribune and nothing else, sixteen hours a day. If that didn't kill him, he might possibly learn to believe in negroes.

Tuesday Morning, February 2, 1867.

Gen. Grant and the Darkies.

A band of saucy negroes called on General Grant the other day, calling themselves "a committee of the Colored Men's National Convention," and presented a speech prepared by some abolitionist in this country, who is void of information and sense as he must be of shame. There is no fault to be found with the negroes for this disgusting farce. They are not responsible for it. They are the tools of cunning knaves who use them for the purposes of party and faction.

But this address, which was repeated by a negro called Langston, is a curiosity of exaggeration and impudence. It starts off by declaring that these darkies addressed Grant "in the name of four millions of American citizens, in the name of seven hundred thousand electors of African descent."

In the first place, there are no "four millions" of negroes now living in this country, nor three million, either. Their numbers have been reduced to a million or a million and a half by the war, and by their "freedom." Nor are there, even taking the Republican estimate of its negro force, any such number as "seven hundred thousand electors of African descent."

There is probably less than half that number, unless such fellows as Hamlin and Sumner are to be counted as darkies.

But this address sets forth that these seven hundred thousand black electors "braved the threats," etc. When, where, and how have that number of negroes braved any threats? This is all both, which the darkies have been taught by such patriots as find this slang in Congress.

These darkies call Congress "our national government," which is very properly said, for it is a negroes' Congress in very deed. They also speak of the "humblest subject of the government," which is well enough for negroes, because they are not expected, nor ought they to be, to write the bosh they repeated ought to know that in this country no citizen is a subject of the government. In the government our fathers framed the people are sovereign, and the government is their subject, or the agent and servant of their sovereignty. The white fellow who prepared this speech for Sambro is either a fool or scamp. Probably, is a good deal of both.

But Grant's reply was a poser. The papers call it a speech. It occupied just ten newspaper lines, and said nothing, except to hope that the darkies will "by their future conduct prove themselves deserving of all they now claim."

CHRONICLES OF JUBAL.

BY A MEMBER OF WHARTON'S DIVISION.

Chapter First.

[A friend has furnished us with the following amusing and spirited "Chronicles," which were written and printed during the war, immediately after Gen. Early's famous attack upon the Federal forces at Cedar Creek, on the 19th of October, 1864.

1. And it came to pass that Jubal, whose surname was Early, called together the chiefs of his tribes and said unto them view the country around.

2. And they went forth and from a hill of much height they viewed their enemies and all the surrounding country, and the distance they saw was exceedingly great.

3. And returning they said let not all thy people go up, but let some go around our camp and peradventure we may scatter them.

4. So Gordon took with him several of his brethren and took—thousand and twenty and two good footmen and a thousand good horsemen, and they moved out of camp by night, that they might come upon the camp of pursuers and strike them suddenly.

5. And one of the chosen leaders was called to Jubal, and Jubal said unto him, "Drive them before whilst my people press them before and on both sides."

6. And there was a horseman of exceeding great name, who was in much favor with Jubal and Jubal said unto him, "Lead my enemies on my left."

7. And when morning was nigh Gordon went down from the mountain and sought them. And when it was day Sheridan came himself with a part of his men in the plain surrounding, but Gordon gave him no rest but slew many of his men and leaders, and took many of his men and chariots and horses and guns.

8. Jubal was exceedingly well pleased and full of joy. And soon he stopped to plunge into the enemy again, when Sheridan brought ten thousand and thirty and two fresh men. And they came like a hurricane.

9. And Jubal said to the men that were with him and to his people fear not; for ye are not this militia, ye are ye are ye are of the army. Remember, ye are ye are ye are of the army.

Five Miles Above the Earth.

One dull day in August, just after noon, a balloon rose in the air at the foot of Clost Hills, on the western edge of the central plain of England.

It was inflated with the lightest gases which chemical skill could produce, and it rose with amazing velocity.

A mile up, and it entered a stratum of cloud more than a thousand feet thick. Emerging from this, the sun shone brightly on the airship; the sky overhead was of the clearest and deepest blue, and below lay cloud-land.

Up rose the balloon with tremendous velocity. Four miles above the earth a pigeon was let loose; it dropped down through the air as if it had been a stone.

Up five miles above the earth—higher than the inaccessible summit of Chimborazo or Dawagiri. Despite the sunshine everything freezes.

The air grows too thin to support life, even for a few minutes. Two men are only in that adventurous balloon—the one steering the airship, the other watching the scientific instruments, and recording them with a rapidity bred of long practice.

Suddenly as the latter looks at his instruments, his sight grows dim; he takes a lens to help his sight, and only remarks from the falling barometer that they are testing rapidly.

He tries to call his comrade, who has gone up into the ring above; a whisper in that deep silence would suffice—but no sound comes from his lips—he was voiceless.

The steersman comes down into the car; he sees his comrade in a swoon, and feels his own senses failing him.

He saw at once that life and death hung upon a few moments. He seized or tried to seize the valve in order to open it and let out the gas.

His hands are purple with intense cold—they are paralyzed, they will not respond to his will. He seized the valve with his teeth; it opened a little—once, twice, thrice.

The swooned marksman returned to consciousness, and saw the steersman standing before him. He looked at his instrument; but now the barometer was rising rapidly; the balloon was descending. Brandy was used. They had been higher above the earth than mortal man or any living thing had ever been before.

Precision in Business.

On a certain Saturday night, the clerks of the Bank of England could not make the balance come out right by just one hundred pounds. This is a serious matter in that establishment—not the cash, but the discrepancy, however slight.

A hue and cry, therefore, was made after this one hundred pounds, as if the old lady in Thread-needle street would be the donor, as an insolvent for the want of it.

Luckily, on the Sunday morning following, the clerk, in the middle of the sermon, perhaps—a suspicion of the truth dawned through his mind quicker than a lightning flash.

He told the chief cashier, on Monday morning, that perhaps the mistake might have been in packing some boxes of specie for the West Indies, which had been sent to Southampton for shipment.

The suggestion was immediately acted upon. Here was a case—lightning against steam, and steam with a start of forty-eight hours. Instantly the wires were set to work, and the vessel was ordered to stop.

"Just weighing anchor," was the reply. "Stop her," frantically shouted the telegraph. It was done. "Have a deck certain boxes, marked so and so, and weigh them carefully." They were weighed, and one, the delinquent, was found heavier by just one packet of a hundred sovereigns.

"Let her go," says the telegraph. The West India folks were debited with just one hundred pounds more, and the error was corrected without looking into the boxes, or delaying the voyage and hour.

Only A Grain of Sand. A man who had for years carried an old and cherished watch about him, one day called on his maker, and told him that it was no longer useful, for it would not keep time correctly.

"Let me examine it," said the maker; and, taking a powerful glass, he looked carefully and steadily into the works, till he spied just one little grain of sand. "I have it," said he, "I can get over your difficulty."

"About this moment, by some wonderful but unseen power, the little grain, suspecting what was coming, exclaimed: "I am alone! I am but a small thing, and take up so little room, I cannot possibly injure the watch."

EXTRAORDINARY PISTOL PRACTICE.—Captain John Travis gave another exhibition of pistol shooting at his gallery in Chicago recently, in which he excelled any of his previous performances.

A NEW GAME.—Well, we don't know that it is so very new, but it is in these parts, we believe, and so we give a description of it for the benefit of all concerned.

My Loo.—We learn from our exchanges, that a new game of chance has recently been introduced in this country, called "My Loo." It is less objectionable than the other games of chance in this, that there is no chance of cheating.

A MINUTE PUDDING.—To make the fire one teaspoon of sweet starch for every one table-spoonful of flour wet with a little milk; stir it well; it took a few minutes; oil common tapers with butter and pour the pudding into them; when cool turn the cup into a saucer, the pudding will slip nicely; serve with sweetened cream. This is a quick and cheap dessert.

WHOOPIING COUGH.—A decoction of chestnut leaves (castanea vicia) is said to be a sovereign remedy for whooping cough. Steep three or four drachms of the leaves in boiling water, and give it either hot or cold, with or without sugar. Carbonate of lime should be put in saucers about the room in which there is a sufferer from this disease. It prevents infection.

On the supposition that an astronomer of Indianapolis has read the stars aright, the world is to be desolated this year by a plague. It is to start in Russia in silks from Egypt and Turkey, will spread over Europe and America, and will spot the people like a leopard. The statistics of the anticipated mortality are given, but it is announced that there will not be enough left to give the dead a Christian burial.

A shirt made with the magnetic needle and the thread of a person's discourse will be exhibited at the World's Fair in New York.

The most tender hearted man ever heard of was a shoemaker, who always shut his eyes and whistled when he ran his all into a hole.

WOMEN - INFANT LIFE.
Why do we have so many children who die before they are a year old? Why do we have so many women who die before they are a year old? Why do we have so many children who die before they are a year old? Why do we have so many women who die before they are a year old?
