DEATH OF GEORGE IV.

The long expected intelligence has come at last, and as will be seen by the details below, the King of England breathed his last at half past 3 o'clock on the morning of 26 June.

No change in the ministry or in the present policy of the English Government will probably follow this event. His present Majesty, WILLIAM IV. (born August 21st, 1765) has, it is said by the best authority, expressed his full confidence in the Duke of Wellington.

The long expected intelligence has come at last, and as will be seen by the details below, the King of England breathed his last at half past 3 o'clock on the morning of 26 June.

His Majesty William IV. arrived at St. James's Palace a few moments before twelve o'clock on Saturday, and appeared to be in excellent health. The King entered the State room, in which the throne is placed, about one o'clock.

The King gave an audience to the Duke of Wellington, when his Grace kissed hands, as First Lord of the Treasury. The other Ministers and Officers, and also the Members of the late King's household, who attended the Court, kissed hands, on their re-appointment to office.

The Court broke up at half past 4 o'clock. The King left the Palace about half past 5 o'clock, on his return to Bushy Park, escorted by a detachment of the Life Guards.

After the breaking up of the King's Court, the Cabinet Ministers re-ascsembled at the Foreign Office; there were present the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Wellington, Earl Bathurst, Russell, and Aberdeen, Viscount Melville, Lord Ellenborough, Sir Robert Peel, Sir George Murray, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Mr. Herries.

PROCLAMATION. His Majesty, accompanied by the Duke of Gloucester and the Earl of Erroll, arrived at his Palace in St. James's about 20 minutes before 10 o'clock on Monday morning, June 28th, from his residence in Bushy Park.

A few minutes after 10 o'clock the window of the presence chamber was thrown open, and the King came forward stone, habited in a suit of mourning, and wearing the ribbon of the Order of the Garter.

Sir George Naylor, as King of Arms, exactly underneath the window where the King stood, then read the proclamation, announcing the decease of the late King and the accession of the present Majesty.

Immediately on the landing of the advanced guard, the first battery, mounting sixteen guns, was carried at the point of the bayonet. As this battery commanded the bay, the remainder of the army was covered in its debarkation.

The packet-ship De Rahm, arrived at New York on Sunday from Havre, having sailed from that port on the 5th July.

THE FREE PRESS. WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1833.

The late arrivals from Europe have brought an unusual quantity of interesting news. The death of George IV. of England, and the accession of his brother the Duke of Clarence, who has taken the title of William the IV., are events which have produced considerable sensation throughout the world.

The drought in the neighborhood continues without any alleviation until Monday last, when we were visited by a storm of wind, rain, hail, thunder and lightning. The rain fell in torrents, deluging our streets in a few minutes. The hail was of large size, and we fear has done considerable damage to the corn crops.

Messrs. Editors.-The recent hail storm recalled to my mind a beautiful theory of an American philosopher, which satisfactorily accounts for the phenomenon of hail. The sudden change of the temperature of the atmosphere, in the hottest season of the year, so less than the peculiar form of the hail stones, has always occasioned some difficulty in the various theories...
