POETICAL.

SONG.
BY THOMAS H. BAYLE.

She never blamed him, never!
But received him when he came,
With a welcome kind as ever,
And she tried to look the same.
But vainly she dissembled,
For whenever she tried to smile,
A tear unbidden trembled
In her blue eyes all the while.
She knew that she was lying,
And she trembled not her loom—
She never thought of sighing,
O'er her beauty's blighted bloom.
She knew her check was altered,
And she thought of him no more,
But her sweet voice only faltered
When she spoke of losing him.
From the tale where she was born,
'Tis true he had himself her love,
To the world's cruel scorn;
But yet she never blamed him
For the anguish she had known,
And though she seldom named him,
She thought of him no more.
She sighed when he crossed her,
For she knew that they must part—
She spoke not when he pressed her,
To his young and panting heart.
The banners waved around her,
And she heard the bugle's sound—
They passed—and strangers found her
Cold and lifeless on the ground.

ON HEALTH.

From the Journal of Health.

CLEANLINESS, one of what Aristotle calls the half virtues, is recommended in the Spectator, for the three following considerations: first, as a mark of politeness; secondly, as it produces love; and, thirdly, as it bears analogy to purity of mind. In eastern climates, it is enforced in both the Jewish and Mahometan law, as next to the religious observances. The regulations prescribed in Leviticus and Deuteronomy are very explicit on this point; and we learn that Mahomet used to enjoin his followers to wash the face, neck, hands, and arms, before each prayer. Now, as their prayers are repeated five times daily, they are bound to perform their ablutions as often. Besides these, there are others, adapted to particular states and exigencies, which are eminently conducive to individual comfort and health. When the pilgrims to Mecca cannot well procure water, in the deserts of Arabia, they still hold in mind the precepts of their Koran, and rub the parts above mentioned with sand.

ness of the other functions, and general disturbance, as in colds, rheumatism, indigestion, and numerous other ailments, will often be the consequence of such neglect. What we mean to say is, that the common atmospheric vicissitudes would often fail to give rise to colds and rheumatism, but for the neglect to preserve the skin in its healthy state; nor would various kinds of food, which are arranged as causes of dyspepsia, prove such, were this precaution duly attended to.

We cannot, on this occasion, do better than to repeat the rules proposed by Hufeland for preserving cleanliness and a sound state of the skin, which is considered as very powerful means for the prolongation of life.

1st. Remove carefully every thing that the body has secreted, as corrupted or prejudicial. This may be done by changing the linen often, daily if it be possible, and also the bed clothes, or at least the sheets; by using, instead of a feather bed, a mattress, which attracts less dirt; and by continually renewing the air in apartments, and particularly in one's bed-chamber.

2nd. Let the whole body be washed daily with cold water, and rub the skin strongly at the same time, by which means it will acquire a great deal of life and vigour.

3d. One ought to bathe once a week, the whole year through, in tepid waters; and it will be a desirable service to add to it three or four ounces of soap.

A late writer lays great stress on the beneficial effects of washing with cold water; and details minutely the process which he deems most advisable. He recommends a person on waking, if determined or obliged then to get up, to remain three or four minutes until perfectly collected. The quilt, or some of the outside covering, should next be thrown off, so that he may, for a minute or two, cool gradually. He should then proceed to wash himself, dressed only to the waist—it being impossible to do it otherwise effectually. The following directions are next given:

Dip the face two or three times in a basin of cold water. The eyes may be either open on immersion, or, as it may be easier on beginning, while under the water. After this, water should be squirted briskly into the eyes with a syringe. On the first trials they may be closed, and opened immediately after the dash; but they will soon be able to bear the shock when open.

Water should be squirted against each ear. You must next, with the hands, and using soap, wash well the armpits, the back of the neck, behind the ears, the arms up to the shoulder, the breast, loins, and entirely round the waist. After having well dried with a very coarse cloth, you may finish with a fine towel, and then rub with a hard flesh-brush over the body, wherever you can conveniently reach, particularly the chest, arms, abdomen, and small of the back. The arms should then be thrown back very briskly, twenty or thirty times, which will open the chest, and may promote a salutary expectation. This will altogether occupy, even when well accustomed to it, about 15 minutes, but it will be time well bestowed.

The author asserts confidently, that this practice, when assisted by cleanliness of the teeth, is a certain preventive of that galling pain, the tooth-ache, and also a cure for those afflicted with it. He of course means that variety called rheumatic. It so fortifies and strengthens the system, that those who have long persevered in it, are not near so liable to rheumatism, nor colds and coughs, as before. It also cleans and improves the sight, and contributes much to its duration. The practice ought, of course, to be continued all the year round. The fluid are recommended to begin in summer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A SCENE IN JAMAICA.
The Torch was lying at anchor in Bluefield's Bay. It was between eight and nine in the morning. The land wind had died away, and the sea breeze had not set in—there was not a breath stirring. The pennant from the mast head fell sluggishly down, and clung amongst the rigging like a dead snake, whilst the folds of the St. George's ensign that hung from the mizen-peak, were as motionless as if they had been carved in marble.

The anchorage was one unbroken mirror, except where its glasslike surface was broken by the gambols of a skipjack, or the flashing stoop of his enemy, the pelican; and the reflection of the vessel was so clear and steady, that at the distance of a cable's length you could not distinguish the water-line, nor tell where the substance ended and shadow began, until the casual dashing of a bucket overboard for a few moments broke up the phantom-ship; but the wavering fragments soon re-united, and she again floated double, like the swan of the poet. The heat was so intense, that the iron stanchions of the swing could not be grasped with the hand, and where the decks were not screened by it, the pitch boiled out from the seams. The swell rolled in from the offing in long shining undulations, like a sea of quicksilver, whilst every now and then a flying fish would spout out from the unruddered bosom of the heaving water, and shoot away like a silver arrow, until it dropped with a flash into the sea again.

The crew were listlessly spinning oakum, and mending sails, under the shade of the awning; the only exceptions to the general languor were John-crow, the black, and Jackoo, the monkey. The former (who was an improvisator of a rough stamp) sat out on the bowsprit, through choice, beyond the shade of the canvass, without hat or shirt, like a bronzed bust, busy with his task, whatever it might be, singing at the top of his pipe, and between while confabulating with his hairy ally, as if he had been a messmate. The monkey was hanging by the tail from the dolphin-striker, admiring what John-crow called "his own ugly face in the water."

Talk like yours would be good ting for a sailer, Jackoo, it would leave his two hands free aloft—more use, more ornament too, I'm sure, than de piece of greasy junk dat hangs from de captains tail. Now I shall sing to you, how dat Coromante rascal, my fader, was sell me on de Gold Coast.

"Two red nightcap, one long knife,
All bin get for Quackoo,
For gun next day him sell him wife—
You tink dat good song, Jackoo?"

"Chocko, chocko," chattered the monkey, as if in answer. "Ah, you tink so sensible hominal! What is dat? shark? Jackoo, come up, air; don't you see dat big shovel-nosed fish looking at you? Pull your hand out of the water, I tell you." The negro threw himself on the gammoning of the bowsprit to take hold of the poor ape, who mistaking his kind intention, and ignorant of his danger, shrunk from him, lost his hold, and fell into the sea. The shark instantly sank to have her, can then dashed at his prey, raising his snout over him, and shooting his head and shoulders three or four feet out of the water, with poor Jackoo shrieking in his jaws, whilst his small bones crackled and crunched under the monster's triple row of teeth.

"What this small tragedy was acting, and painful enough it was to the kind-hearted negro—I was looking out towards the eastern horizon, watching the first dark blue ripple of the sea-breeze, when a rushing noise passed over my head.

I looked up and saw a gullinasso, the large-carrion crow of the tropics, sailing contrary to the habits of his kind, seaward over the brig. I followed it with my eye, until it vanished in the distance, when my attention was attracted by a dark speck far out in the offing, with a little tiny white sail. With my glass I made it out to be a ship's boat, but I saw no one on board, and the sail was idly flapping about the mast.

On making my report, I was desired to pull towards it in the gig; and as we approached, one of the crew said he thought he saw some one peering over the bow. We drew nearer, and I saw him distinctly. "Why don't you haul the sheet aft, and come down to us, air?"

He neither moved nor answered, but as the boat rose and fell on the short sea, raised by the first of the breeze, the face kept mopping and mowing at us over the gunwale.

fired my musket when the crow that I had seen rose from the boat into the air, but immediately alighted again, in our astonishment, yulure-like, with outstretched wings, upon the head.

Under the shadow of this horrible plume, the face seemed on the instant to alter like a hideous change in a dream. It appeared to become of a death-like paleness, and anon streaked with blood. Another stroke of the ear—the chin had fallen down, and the tongue was falling out. Another pull—the eyes were gone, and from their sockets, brains and blood were fermenting, and flowing down the cheeks. It was the face of a putrefying corpse.

By the gambols of a skipjack, or the flashing stoop of his enemy, the pelican; and the reflection of the vessel was so clear and steady, that at the distance of a cable's length you could not distinguish the water-line, nor tell where the substance ended and shadow began, until the casual dashing of a bucket overboard for a few moments broke up the phantom-ship; but the wavering fragments soon re-united, and she again floated double, like the swan of the poet. The heat was so intense, that the iron stanchions of the swing could not be grasped with the hand, and where the decks were not screened by it, the pitch boiled out from the seams. The swell rolled in from the offing in long shining undulations, like a sea of quicksilver, whilst every now and then a flying fish would spout out from the unruddered bosom of the heaving water, and shoot away like a silver arrow, until it dropped with a flash into the sea again.

We had no sooner cast our grappling over the bow, and begun to tow the boat to the ship, than the abominable bird that we had scared settled, down into it again, notwithstanding our proximity, and began to peck at the face of the dead boy. At this instant, we heard a gibbering noise, and saw something like a bundle of old rag roll out from beneath the stern-sheet, and apparently make a fruitless attempt to drive the gallinasso from its prey. Heaven and earth, what an object met our eyes! It was a full-grown man, but so wasted, that one of the boys lifted him by his belt and with one hand. His knees were drawn up to his chin, his hands were like the talons of a bird, while the falling-in of his cheeks, late-coloured and withered features, gave an unhealthy relief to his forehead, over which the horny and transparent skin was braced so tightly that it seemed ready to crack. But in the midst of this desolation, his deep-set coal-black eyes sparkled like two diamonds with the fever of his sufferings; there was a fearful fascination in their flashing brightness, contrasted with the death-like aspect of the face and rigidity of the frame. When sensible of our presence, he tried to speak, but could only utter a low moaning sound. At length—"Agua, agua!"—we had not a drop of water in the boat. "El muchacho esta moriendo de sed—agua!"

We got on board, and the surgeon gave the poor fellow some weak tepid grog. It acted like magic. He gradually uncoiled himself; his voice, from being weak and husky, became comparatively clear. "El Hijo—Agua para mi pedrillo—No le hace para mi—Oh, la noche pasada, la noche pasada!" He was told to compose himself, and that his boy would be taken care of. "Dexa me verle entoces, por Dios, dexa me verle!"—and he crawled grovelling on his chest, like a crushed worm across the deck, until he got his head over the port-hull, and looked down into the boat. He there beheld the pale face of his dead son; it was the last object he ever saw—"Ay de mi!" he groaned heavily, and dropped his face against the ship's side—he was dead.

FROM THE MASSACHUSETTS JOURNAL.

The Pestilence.—In my mind, the umbrat of the ancients has always seemed and pleasantly associated. The clean, white marble containing the purified remains of all we have loved, is an object around which affection still loves to linger, but the damp, dark grave, with its silent, lifeless work of corruption, is a revolting subject of contemplation, even where love is stronger than death. Then there is the fear of being buried before the vital spark is extinct, and of returning to consciousness, with the weight of the earth upon you, and the fresh air of heaven shut out for ever! To me this idea is so terribly distinct that it is the spectre of my waking hours, and the nightmare of my dreams. Perhaps the vividness of the impression is owing to the remark I frequently heard from an aged relative, while I was yet a very small child; "that hundreds and hundreds were buried before they were dead, when the yellow fever raged so terribly in Boston. That period is well remembered by our fathers, when pestilence walked abroad at noonday, and the heath-stone was silent, and dreary as the tomb. The death carts went their continued round through every hour of the day and night, and unshrouded and uncoloured, the newly dead were hurried to their last home. I knew a man, who, during this time of peril, was snatched from the grave merely by the persevering affection of his wife. Of the correctness of the story there is no doubt, for I have often heard it repeated by both the parties concerned. This awful visitation of God came upon them when they were newly married; when existence was happiness, and separation worse than death. The young husband became a victim to that tion over the city. The friends of his wife urged her to seek refuge in the country, and not lose her own life in a useless attempt to save his. But no persuasion could induce her to leave him; night and day she was by his bed side; and in the anguish of her heart, she prayed that the pestilence might likewise rest upon her. But her prayer was not answered—surely and rapidly it did its work upon all her heart held dear; but to her, death would not come, though she prayed for it, and sought it with tears. She had inhaled the breath of her dying husband; but to her it was harmless, and in the madness of despair she repined at the merciful decrees of Heaven. No one was with her in the house—she was alone with the dead. Suddenly the silence of the deserted streets was interrupted by the rambling of the death carts; and she knew they had come to take him from her. She suddenly flashed into her mind that life might be in him!—Her entreaties excited compassion, and she was permitted to keep the corpse one half hour longer. The impression made upon her mind had the strength of inspiration; and though every restorative, which ingenuity could devise, had failed to produce effect, she would not relinquish hope. Again the carts came round, and the solemn sound, "Bring out the dead," disturbed the fearful stillness. Again the young wife intreated, wept and screamed—the hearts of the men whose dreadful employment accustomed them to such scenes, were touched; but they would not yield. They said "the safety of the city required them to be firm in the discharge of their duty; that they had already disobeyed strict orders, and they dared not to do it again; that the hope of restoring him was mere insanity; it was evident he had long been dead."

When she found they would not be moved by her prayers she threw her arms around the body, and clung to it with the strength of madness, declaring if they buried one, they should bury both. The men after a few gentle attempts to remove her, dashed the tears from their eyes, and saying, "We cannot separate them, retire here another half hour of hope. The moments of that interval had a value, of which mortals under ordinary circumstances can form no conception. Restorative after restorative was applied, but all in vain. With sickening anxiety she fastened her eye upon the watch and then on the still cold form beside her. The half hour was nearly gone; in five minutes they would again come to claim the dead; and she felt that she must resist no longer. She breathed into his nostrils to restore the action of the lungs—but no change came over his rigid features. She bathed his temples and moistened his lips with ad volatile—the terrible rambing of the carts was heard in the distance—and in the trembling eagerness of the moment she spilled the contents of the vial into his nostrils—a sudden convulsion passed over the face of the dead!—a short, quick gasp—and the eyes heavily opened!

The men with the death-carts were startled by a loud shrill shriek, that sounded as if it tore assunder the soul from which it came. When they entered, they found the dead living and living senseless.

—Both husband and wife were soon after restored to health. They lived to be the parents of a numerous family; and the husband now survives her, who, with the strong arm of love, thus snatched him from an early grave.

Commercial.—New York and Philadelphia papers contain the advertisement of an American firm, who have established themselves as commission merchants in Constantinople.

Punning.—A footman of delicate constitution, and somewhat addicted to reading the newspapers, lately refused to black his master's boots, because "low duties increase consumption."

Lord Byron.—Flint's Western Review for June, contains an article on Moore's Life of Lord Byron; the following is an extract:

We find fault—and we wish to make it emphatic—with the indifference with which the Biographer speaks of the vices of his friend. Away with all his softening upon such points. Atheism and adultery and seduction and prostitution and drunkenness and gambling and gin and "the fancy" and domestic quarrelling and the discharge of poker and tongs back and forward, between mother and son, and separation of husband and wife—are not at all less reprehensible in the upper thousand times more so—inasmuch as the unfortunate inmates have a thousand more motives and restraints, and in the same proportion, less temptations. May the public vision in the United States never become so far perverted, as to call light darkness, and darkness light; or allow an American to speak, either with complacency, or even softening extenuation, of such crimes as were woven in the very woof and tissue of Lord Byron's Life. No matter how such crimes are viewed by the haut ton of England, Death is death, though patricians may choose to call it decease; and drunkenness and gin and adultery and fighting remain the same things, however lords and fine ladies may phrase them by more flattering and fashionable terms. There is a real and positive influence likely to flow from an affected softening, in speaking of the follies and crimes of such a man as the person we are considering. It is much easier to say the profligacy of Lord Byron, than to acquire his genius and talents. Many a weak and silly Roman advocate, walked with his neck away, because Cicero had a wen, and was physically obliged so to walk. We have known more than one fool-fancy himself a genius; and to treat the same illusion in others, quarrel with his wife, and part with her to become more like Byron. Men are sufficiently prone to gratify their propensities, without the example of the rich and titled and talented and admired, to bear them out in doing it. And there is a ridiculousness of infaible degradation, in copying the follies and deformities of these above us.

REVOLUTIONARY ANECDOTE.

Boston Boys.—The British troops which were sent to Boston, to keep that rebellious town in order, were every where received with the most unequivocal marks of anger and detestation. During their stay, "the very air seemed filled with suppressed breathings of indignation." The insolence and indiscretion of some subaltern officers, increased the ill-will of the citizens, and vexatious and quarrels multiplied daily. "At this period of exasperation, the boys were much in the habit of rushing from the pond in the Common. The English troops, from the mere love of tantalizing, destroyed all their labours. They complained of the injury, and industriously set about repairs. However, when they returned from school, they found the snow-hills again levelled. Several of them now waited on the British Captains to inform him of the misconduct of his soldiers. No notice was taken of their complaint, and the soldiers grew every day more provokingly insolent. At last they resolved to call a meeting of the largest boys in town and wait upon Gen. Gage, Commander in Chief of the British forces. When shown into his presence, he asked, why so many children had called to see him. "We come, sir, said the foremost, to claim a redress of grievances." "What have your fathers been teaching you rebellion, and sent you here to utter it?" "Nobody sent us, sir," and his dark eye flashed; "we have never injured or insulted your troops; but they have trodden down our snow-hills, and broken the ice on our skating ground. We complained, and they called us young rebels, and told us to help ourselves, if we could. We told the Captain of this, and he laughed at us. Yesterday our works were a third time destroyed, and now we will bear it no longer." Gen. Gage looked at them with undisguised admiration, and, turning to an officer who stood near him, he exclaimed, "Good heaven! the very children draw in a love of liberty with the air they breathe!" and added, "You may go my brave boys; and be assured that if any of my troops hereafter molest you, they shall be severely punished."

FOREIGN.

VERY LATE FROM ENGLAND.

The packet ship Dover, Capt. Bursley, from Liverpool, arrived at Boston late in the evening on Tuesday last. By this arrival, the editors of the New York Commercial Advertiser have received from their attentive Correspondents the Liverpool Times of the 23d of June, and a letter written at the eve of the departure of the Dover.

The king was still living, but it was out of the compass of probability that his sufferings could be protracted for many days.

Our correspondent's letter comprehends the substance of the latest news from Liverpool, June 22, 12 A. M.

The only thing which absorbs the public attention here, is the distressing situation of the King. My private advices from Windsor direct, which are up to two o'clock on Monday morning, by express, state that each succeeding hour is expected to close the reign of our illustrious monarch: recovery is impossible.

An extraordinary express from Paris, which reached London on Monday morning, announces the news of the capture of Algiers. The embarkation commenced on the morning of 14th June; at 4 o'clock. The enemy were driven from the position which they had taken up in the rear, and the division Betherne captured nine guns and two mortars. The French army now occupy the heights in front of the peninsula.

The news which reached Paris by Telegraphic despatch was announced by authority in the Theatre of the Opera, and created the most enthusiastic feeling. Yet strange to say, owing to the wish of the liberators to defeat the hopes of the Ministry, the news had the effect of depressing, instead, as might naturally have been supposed, raising the French funds, from 77.50c. to 77.75c. ED. WILMER.

ALGIERS.

It will be seen, by the following Telegraphic Despatch, which is confirmed by our correspondent's letters, that the French army have landed on the African Coast:

TELEGRAPHIC DESPATCH.
Bay of Tasseta Chico, June 14.
The fleet yesterday anchored in the bay of Sidi Ferach.

The whole of the army landed today, and now occupy the heights in front of the peninsula. We have taken possession of the enemy's batteries. The head-quarters are at Tasseta Chico.

The illustrious personage in Prussia, who was stated to have embraced the Protestant faith, is the Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria, now Princess Royal of Prussia. Her abjuration of Catholicism took place on Ascension Day, in the chapel of the King's palace.

Dr. Siebold, the Naturalist.—Letters from Munich state that this celebrated naturalist, who had been imprisoned at Japan, has been restored to liberty, and has arrived at Batavia with his valuable collection.

ATROCIOUS PIRACY AND MURDER.

HIS MAJESTY'S SHIP ATOLL.
Sierra Leone, May 3.
Sir—I have the honor to acquaint you that the Hon. Company's schooner St. Helena arrived here this day on her way to Freetown, with despatches from Commodore Collier. She was attacked on the 6th April, in lat. 1, 30, south, long 90, west, by a piratical force under French colours, and manned with a crew of from 40 to 50 men of all nations, who I regret to hear, murdered Captain Harrison, the chief mate, and 12 of the crew, besides Dr. Widdle, of the Hon. Company's medical service; and plundered the vessel of all money that could be found on board, a great deal of her cargo, cut away her masts, scuttled the vessel in order to sink her, and after they left her, fired many shot through her, and abandoned her, not knowing that the carpenter and five men were left on board concealed, by whose exertions the vessel has been saved, and brought into this port. I am sorry that the mail, the Commodore's despatches, and almost all the letters, appear to have been destroyed, at least they are no where to be found. From the description of the vessel, (which I have forwarded to the Admiralty,) she appears to be one well known to the ships of the squadron, and as it is probable she has no idea that the St. Helena escaped, I am in great hopes she may proceed to the coast and be there captured by one of the ships of the squadron. It is my intention, in the absence of Commodore Collier, to render every assistance in the re-equipment of the schooner from the public stores, and to put her in charge of Lt. Warner, a deserving officer on half pay, lately in command of a ship lost on the coast through the ignorance of the pilot.

I have the honor, &c.
ALEX. GORDON, Captain.

To the Secretary of the Hon. East India Company, London.

The London Herald of the 11th, states, that by documents in the Library at Stowe, the author of Junius had been discovered. Lord Temple, who was killed by a fall from his horse in 1775, is said to have been the person.

Mr. O'Connell, in the beginning of June, addressed this note to the editor of the Dublin Morning Register:

House of Commons.—Friday.
My DEAR SIR,—Announce, trumpet-tongued, that the valiant Duke of Wellington perseveres in all his taxes—the newspaper stamps &c. &c. Sir John Newport saw him at one o'clock this day, by appointment, and got the conclusive fiat of the "council of war"—that England should be relieved of taxes to the amount of 5,000,000, and Ireland burdened with 300,000, because she is—bless the mark—prosperous! Is there any man in Ireland so stupid as not now to perceive the value of a domestic Legislature?—Think you that any Parliament in Ireland could dare attempt to add, at such a moment as this, to the burdens of an exhausted and starving population? The Royal Duke—for I think he should be so in name as he is in reality—said last year, that he would be mad if he looked for the office of Prime Minister. Was his Highness prophetic?

But look at home and see—now see the reason why "friends of Ireland" were proclaimed down. "This does, indeed, prove the incapacity of those who would wish every organ of the State to be such as the feeling of Ireland could be exhibited. They paid us the compliment to avow our utility, even by the despotic Act of suppression.

Call on every county, town, city, borough, parish, and village, to petition. Let there be no mixing of the matter—let the petitioners declare that whoever gives any support to such an Administration as this, is a practical enemy of the impoverished people of Ireland. I have always said that the Wellington Administration was essentially hostile to Ireland. Every hour convinces me more and more of the truth; and yet, if even one half of the Irish members stand together, we will beat the eloquent Goulbourn, and candid Peel, and most luminous Wellington.

It now depends on the Press and the people to do their duty. "War to the knife" is proclaimed against us; one universal rally can alone ensure the defeat of those mischievous measures. In haste, yours most truly,
DANIEL O'CONNELL.

My radical reformation will be over in about an hour.

FRENCH EXPEDITION TO ALGIERS.
We are informed, says the New York Gazette, by Capt. Silliman, of the schr Dighton, arrived last evening, in 13 days from Gaudoulope, that a French ship arrived the day before he sailed, in 26 days from Havre, having sailed on the 15th June, and reported that a telegraphic communication was received just before sailing, which announced that the French expedition had landed 15,000 men to the northward of Algiers.

France.—The London Quarterly Review closes an article on the political condition and prospects of France, with the following remarks:

We think it is hardly possible to doubt that, unless the existing government adopts, and succeeds in carrying into effect, some very decisive measure in the course of the present year, there will ensue another burst of convulsion;—and Napoleon has left no saying of more indisputable truth behind him, than that a "revolution in France is a revolution in Europe."

One of two things must happen:—Charles X. will obtain a much greater share of power—or the people will usurp the sovereignty, and either overturn the throne by sheer force, as they did before, or reduce the wearer of the crown to a sort of president of their democracy. There is no longer any intermediate class between these two estates; and one of the two must manifest, must, ere long, gain the clear ascendancy.

FROM COLOMBIA.
The Pilgrim, arrived at New York, from Maracaibo, which place she left on the 8th instant, brings rumors, that the government of Venezuela had placed under arrest several officers, charged with being concerned in the projected revolution in favor of Bolivar. Since it was known that Bolivar had resigned, the preparations for war had been suspended, and some of the troops had been disbanded. A good deal of disaffection existed throughout Venezuela. At Maracaibo, placards had been posted, denouncing Parz. Whatever foundation there may prove to be for these reports, we look with anxiety for the departure of Bolivar, who, it was said by the last account, had his baggage on board a vessel at Carthagena, and was expected to sail—not, we hope, merely to some near point of observation, but to Europe, where his influence cannot be suspected, hoped for, or dreaded. The excellent spirit breathed in the address of President Mosquera, gives promise of better days to Colombia. He has been constitutionally elected: does not affect to decline the honor, and promises to do his duty.

VENEZUELA.—Since writing the foregoing, shipnews and papers have been received in town from the Montilla, which sailed from Carthagena on the 27th of May. She had on board there a few days previous from Zabaco, followed to the sea coast by a number of generals and friends, and was waiting for an opportunity to sail for England and France. We have heard from one of the companions of the remaining news shows that he cannot go a moment too soon. Despatches arrived at Carthagena two days before the Montilla sailed, announcing that there had been a counter-revolution in Venezuela; that Parz had been compelled to resign; and that the new party declared for a re-union with New Granada. [N. Y. Com. Ado.]

In addition to the foregoing, says the N. Y. Post, we learn through the politeness of S. E. Burrows, Esq., that Bolivar had departed for a short time, at the solicitation of his classes of citizens. All the gentlemen of distinction waited on him in a body, requesting that he would not abandon them, and on his departure, he was accompanied by Carthagena sought his presence with the same purpose. The southern provinces of Colombia, Guayaquil and Panama, had resolved, that if Bolivar left Colombia, they would separate from Colombia and become independent nations. Thus, it will be seen that the situation in which the Liberator is placed must be extremely painful and perplexing: for decide which way he may, reproach seems to be his lot, and ruin the fate of his country.

Mexico.—According to the New Orleans Bee of the latest date, letters received in that city from persons entitled to full credit, confirm the report of the complete route of General Bravo and Colonel Murcia by Guerrero. It has been considered very doubtful, on the mere strength of the reports received here; but it is far from being improbable.

Algerine Barbarity.—In the Hesperian (N. C.) Register of the 22d inst, we find a letter from an American officer at Port Malion of the 27th May, to the Editor of the Register, which contains the following statement of a shocking massacre by the Algerines.

"A French Store Ship came in last evening from off Algiers, and brought news that during a late gale, there were two brig-s of war driven ashore on the Barbary Coast and that the Officers and crews were all massacred by the Algerines."

The above is confirmed by the last New York papers. The brig Ocean which arrived on Thursday, brought Gibraltar papers to the 10th of June, which contain the following particulars, via Malta. What can the Turkish soldiery of Algiers expect but extermination, should the expedition be successful?

MALTA, JUNE 2.
The following instance of a most barbarous outrage, committed by the people of the territories of the Dey of Algiers, on the crews of two unfortunate ships of the French Navy, has been communicated to us through Captain Hastings of the British brig Ferret, who arrived here from thence on the 29th ultimo.

On the 20th, Captain Hastings arrived off Algiers with letters from Vice Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm, to the French commander, blockading the port. It seems that a French brig, with dispatches from Toulon, had fallen in with another brig of the blockading squadron, which offered to conduct her to their Commodore; but in consequence of the thick and foggy weather, they both ran ashore on the 17th, and the French commander knew not what was the fate of the crews, when Capt. Hastings arrived. Permission was, therefore, granted to the Ferret to enter the port, and Captain Hastings had the honor of learning, on his arrival at the residence of the British Consul, that 110 heads of His Most Christian Majesty's sailors had been brought to the Dey's palace; & that the Senior Captain and eight men were all that had been brought into the town alive. Notwithstanding this dreadful slaughter, no less than 70 men were missing, who it is supposed have been massacred, as a reward of 300 dollars is offered for every head of Frenchman. This information was obtained on the spot, from the Foreign Consul resident in Algiers; some of whom had seen the Frenchmen's heads piled up thus barbarously, and others had spoken with the Senior French Captain, whose recent and miraculous escapes were enough to make the blood thrill while telling it.

M. de Ruyter, a descendant of the illustrious Dutch Admiral, died lately at Toulon in the 92d year of his age, having by will bequeathed the annual product of a house he possessed to form a marriage portion for the most virtuous girl and bravest sailor, both of whom must be natives of the town; and are to be respectively chosen by the Maritime Prefect and the Mayor of Toulon. The marriage will be celebrated every year on the day of the King's fête. The portion will amount to about 1200fr.—R.

INTELLIGENCE.

OFFICE OF THE COLONIZATION SOCIETY.

Washington, July 7, 1830.
The Managers of the American Colonization Society have resolved to dispatch a vessel, to convey one hundred or more emigrants from Norfolk to Liberia on the 1st of October. It is highly important, that applications for a passage in this expedition, should be duly made to the Secretary of the Society in this City. Applications for a passage may also be made to J. LATONK, Esq., Baltimore; JOHN M. PHILL, Esq., Norfolk; B. BRAND, Esq., Richmond; R. H. TOLAN, Lynchburg; or to the Secretaries of any of the State or other Auxiliary Societies.

Editors are respectfully requested to copy the above Notice.

The Colonization Society.—A speedy colonization of Pluto's domains by its founders and supporters.

The foregoing was among the regular toasts drunk at Columbia, South Carolina, at the late Anniversary of American Independence. The sentiment is worthy the midnight revels of a band of freebooters, rather than the generous citizens of Carolina, celebrating the Declaration of Independence. The only surviving member of those who signed the instrument which gives celebrity to the 4th of July, is at this time President of the Colonization Society, against which the blow is aimed. In plain English, the act reads thus: We are assembled to celebrate the signing of the Declaration which asserts our claim to national individuality and sovereignty. Charles Carroll of Carrollton, is now the only one of that Band of Heroes, who staked every thing that was dear to them, on the day of which this is commemorative, he is a supporter of the Colonization Society, an association, formed in the same spirit which produced the separation of these States from Great Britain, an association engaged in asserting the true and permanent interests of our republic, and therefore we wish Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, to be the first.

Who are the supporters of the Colonization Society? Thousands, and tens of thousands of American citizens, in all quarters of the Union, from Maine to Louisiana. Pluto would smile again at such an accession to his gloomy domain. Who are some of the founders of this association? Thomas Jefferson, Bushrod Washington, Henry Clay, Wm. H. Crawford, John Randolph, Andrew Jackson. A majority of the State Legislatures and of the Slave holding States, have expressed their decided approbation of it. The magnanimous Virginia gave birth to the plan now pursued by it, and more than one President of the United States has advocated its claims to generous support.

Truly, we are fallen on evil times, if feelings such as this toast evinces against the brightest names which ought to be sacred to patriotism and diffusive charity.

Attempted Assassination.—On Wednesday night the 21st ult. as Captain Samuel Clagett, of Pleasant Valley, in this county, was returning from Mr. Edward Garrett's between 8 and 9 o'clock, an attempt was made to assassinate him. He was shot at by some unknown person within about three hundred yards of his house, the bullets from appearing to be fired from a few paces from him. The ball passed through his cane and the tappel of his coat.

Capt. Clagett authorizes us to say, that he will give a reward of FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS for the apprehension, on conviction of the perpetrator, of this outrage.

Canal Navigation.—On Friday last, the steamboat Lady of the Lake, Captain Wheeler, left the harbour of Norfolk on her first trip to the river Roanoke, by way of the Dismal Swamp Canal. She is intended to be employed in toiling through the whole route of the canal from Norfolk to Weldon, North Carolina, and is purposely constructed for this kind of navigation, having the paddles in the stern to prevent too great a commotion in the water, and to reduce the breadth of the locks. The President and three Directors of the Dismal Swamp Canal Company, preceded in the boat through the whole length of the canal to Pasquotank river. The editor of the Norfolk Herald also accompanied them, and had an opportunity of judging from his own observation of the practicability of the project. He states that the result of the experiment entirely satisfied the Directors that a steamboat, on the plan of the Lady of the Lake, is less liable to injure the banks by the agitation of the water which the paddle produces, than a vessel propelled by sails, moving with the same velocity; and is not more injurious to them than an ordinary tow-boat.

The following toast was drunk at a "Ladies' Celebration" of Independence, on the 3d inst. in Hampden County, in Massachusetts. "The men rule the world—WE RULE THE MEN." Excellent, and very modest, wihal!

The Cherokee Phoenix, of July 3, says: "We understand, upon good authority, that the President has sent a notification to the Cherokees, to meet him at Nashville, Tennessee, next month; then and there to enter into a treaty. Query: Where are all the former treaties?—We should like to know, whether they are good for any thing."

The Petersburg and Roanoke Rail Road is a thing done; that is, the money is secured, instalments called in, and the work about to be commenced. Stock to the amount of $346,000 has been taken, of which the Corporation of Petersburg took $200,000; the balance was subscribed by individuals. We hope our enterprising fellow citizens will reap in due time, every benefit anticipated from this important work. [Fred. Irena.]

The Trenton Emporium states that the Morris Canal will be navigable from the Delaware to New York the present season, the finances of the company being now in such a state as ensures its completion.

The engineers of the Delaware and Haritan Canal have been engaged for two or three weeks, in running the line of the canal, and are about to proceed to the Haritan River, as fast as practicable. The Canal Company have entered into the business with zeal, and no-doubt remains of its early completion.

In the city of New York during the last week there were 204 deaths. Of these, 51 were men, 97 women, 78 boys and 48 girls; 77 of the foregoing were under the age of one year. Eleven deaths occurred from drinking cold water. [Balt. Amer.]

PENSACOLA, JULY 10.
A Pirate Captured.—Lieut. Jas. P. Wilson arrived at this place on Thursday last with the Spanish Schooner Fenix, which the U. S. Schooner Grampus, Lieut. Com' Mavo captured on the 4th June, off Cape Hayti, for an attempt to commit a piracy on the Brig Kremlin, of Boston, from Antwerp bound to New Orleans. We have included the following particulars. The Schooner is about 60 tons burthen, armed with a 6 pounder and musketa and 19 men, all Spaniards. She was formerly the Pilot Boat-Trimner, of New York. There were 82 negroes on board at the time of the capture, 5 have since died.

Shocking outrage.—The National Journal of July 29, says: About 10 o'clock, last night a foreigner as ordered in a livery stable near Mr. Barnard's Hotel, was stabbed to the heart by another foreigner, who has been acting as showman in this city, and after running about forty or fifty yards fell down and expired. A Coroner's inquest was held, yesterday morning, over the body of the deceased. The verdict was, in substance, that he came to his death by a wound inflicted with a Spanish knife by his antagonist.—The offender has been committed to jail, to take his trial.

An Irishman residing in the Patapsco, about nine miles from Baltimore, was committed to jail on a charge of having murdered a fellow lodger by stamping on his body, and beating him on the head, produced in a momentary fit of passion excited by liquor. Immediately after committing the offence he made his escape, but was arrested on the following morning at a farm-house, where he had called for a drink of cider. The inquest brought in a verdict of willful murder against the prisoner.

Counterfeit.—The Commercial Daily Advertiser, of Cincinnati, cautions the public, that Counterfeit five dollar notes, of the Charleston branch of the Bank of the United States, have been detected in that City.

The Kentucky Reporter states that the crops of all kinds in the neighborhood of Lexington, will be remarkably fine this season.

Frog Market at Brussels.—There is in Brussels a market for frogs, which are brought alive in pails and cans, and prepared for dressing on the spot. The hind limbs, which are the only parts, are cut from the body with scissors, by the women who bring the animals for sale.

During the week ending on the 18th inst. six hundred and eight visitors arrived at Saratoga. Of this number 144 are from New York, 48 from Philadelphia, 40 from Boston, 31 from Albany, 29 from Baltimore, 10 from Charleston, S. C., 7 from Savannah, and the remainder principally from other towns in the United States and the Canadas. The whole number of visitors now in the village is estimated at not less than 800.

At the commencement of 1801, Fulton presented to Buonaparte his memorial on steam boats. I urged, says Bourrienne, a serious examination of the subject. "Bah!" said he, "these projects are all either intrigues or visionaries." Don't trouble me about the business!

Mrs. Cannon, whom we mentioned in our last as having been struck down with lightning, owes her life to the providential circumstance of a bucket of water having been thrown upon her by a little boy in the fright and dilemma of the moment, who appears not to have known what he did, or why he did it. Indeed, for some days he was so afraid of lightning, that he hid himself under the immense patient. An instance is also mentioned of a gentleman at the West being struck down with lightning, and with so great force that the elements of his existence were torn his coat, vest and shirt in shreds, burnt the hair from one side of his head, crossed his breast, passed down the extremities, and out through his shoes, perforating them with holes, as though bullet shot had been forced through them; in some places breaking the skin, and scorching it in its whole course, so as to give it the appearance of an extensive burn! And yet it is said this individual is in a fair way for getting well, in consequence of plentiful effusions of cold water upon the breast and head, and copious bleeding. Remedies of this nature should be known and treasured up in the mind by every one. [N. B. Bedford Record.]

The ship Elizabeth Jane, Capt. Nash, bound on a sailing voyage of eighteen months to two years continuance, now ready to sail from New York for the South sea, has a crew shipped upon the condition that no spirituous liquors shall be on board.

One man addicted to intemperance has enlisted, that he may put himself out of the reach of temptation. The owners have furnished provisions of an extra quality.

A New Project.—It is proposed, in the editorial columns of the New York Sentinel, to form a "combination of editors, without respect to creed, political or religious, in favor of fairness, temperate argument and courteous language, and against party abuse, personalities, misrepresentations of opponents' opinions, and every thing calculated to wound the feelings or arouse the passions of a contemporary."

Speedy communication.—Intelligence from London conveyed to Paris by telegraph in 20 minutes—a distance of 388 miles.

The population of the borough of Norfolk, Va. is 9,800—showing an increase since 1820, of 1,200.

DR. W. JUDKINS' Patent Specific Ointment.

PAINS have been taken to make this sup- ply very good. It may be had at the fol- lowing places, viz: Thompson's, Charlestown. Atm Young's, Martinsburg. E. W. Sprunger's, Harpers Ferry. Turner & Harris', Shepherdstown.

The above Ointment is offered to the public as a safe and certain remedy for those obstinate diseases, some of which have so long defied the skill of medical science.

White Swellings of every description. Sore legs and ulcers of long standing. Scirrhous or Glandular tumors, particularly those hardened tumors in women's breasts, which sometimes terminate in ulcerated cancers.

THE following communication, addressed to the proprietor of Judkins' Ointment, from the Hon. John Tullifer, member of Congress, is published in the most authentic manner in which it is made, and is a strong evidence of its efficacy.

Sir: It has been my wish for a considerable time, to communicate to you the good effect with which I have used the Ointment invented by a Mr. Judkins, and which I now send you enclosed.

THE patient interested in the above-mentioned case, will please to note that I shall attend at the office now occupied by E. L.
