POETICAL.

FROM THE NEW YORK ALBION.

CHANGE.

Change—It comes in words of light,
Or all that the eye can see;
The stamp'd on the silver brow of night,
On the morning's crest of blue;
On the golden cloud in the sunset west,
On the bough which spans the lea;
There's a change for the worst—and a change for the best.
For such like an old me;

There's a voice of change for the huntman's ear,
'Tis heard in the hound's deep bay;
And the warrior too that voice may hear,
In the roar of the battle day;
There's a ring of change in the autumn air,
For the birds of migration flee;
The forest, the stream, the mountain, the sea,
Is a song of a change for me?

A voice of change for the ploughman deep,
It rings where the tempest roar;
For the widow's dream, for the orphan's sleep,
It chants from the wreck-strewn shore;

The breathing late and the sounding bell,
The blossom which scents the tree;
There's a change for each, and a change for all;
But where a change for me?

Give me the mood of the bosom's dread,
To cope with the flashing spear;
To wrap alone in thy arms the dead,
Bring me the laugh of reckless mirth,
Though hollow and wild it be;
A dirge to chant o'er a desolate bairn,
So thou bring change to me.

CHLORIDE OF LIME.

A writer in the National Intelligencer, who has pursued the reports of the Surgeons of the Spanish fleet, to the Commanding General of the station at Cuba, quotes the following evidence of the extraordinary powers of this article, as evinced in the Spanish marine service. The Chloride of lime is an invaluable article, as a 'disinfecting agent,' and the season being now here, in which its free use may be greatly beneficial, we invoke attention to the subjoined results:

On the 11th July last, the fleet destined for the invasion of Mexico, conveying, in addition to the usual complement of mariners, a large number of soldiers, was overtaken in the Gulf of Mexico by a violent tempest, which continued for several days. The severity of the storm rendered it necessary to remove the windsails, and to close, not only the ports of the lower gun deck, but likewise those of the main deck, and to place on the hatchways of the ships, with such a crowd of persons confined together, in the middle of summer, with the tropics; without fresh air, typhus fever, and malignant dysenteries soon made their appearance. The air is described as possessing, in addition to a highly offensive effluvia, an acrid heat, burning to the skin, with a degree of density that arrested respiration and produced giddiness. At this moment of distress and anxiety for the safety of all on board, the chloride was used with the most decided effects.

London Medical and Surgical Journal.

A substance has been found at the depth of a foot and a half in the earth at Van Dieman's Land. It has not yet been described, but it is called indigo-bread. It is covered with a thick skin, has a rounded form like a potato or yam, and is sometimes as large as a man's head. When cut, it appears as if composed of a solid spongy mass, containing a considerable quantity of alimentary matter. No root or fibre has been found adhering to it, so that sometimes it has been thought to be a sort of terrestrial fungus, possessing a principle of animal life. The only indication of its presence which the natives have, is the occurrence of an exceedingly small leaf, which rises from the earth, and is connected with it by very thin and delicate fibres, which break whenever the tubercle is raised.

Baltimore.—A bill is now before the City Council, and expected to pass with great unanimity, to make certain advances which will wholly relieve the Baltimore and Ohio Rail-Road Company from any difficulty that may have been caused by the failure of their application to the Government of the U. States, for assistance. The means to strike the Potowmack will be ample; and when the road shall have proceeded thither, as before named, it will force itself onward. "IT WILL GO ON."

Effects of Canals and Mining.—The borough of Pottsville, which, five or six years ago, contained but five or six houses, has now a resident population of 1503 males, and 847 females—2424. In addition to these, there are 1530 persons there, who do not consider themselves permanent residents of the borough. Total of the present population, 5774. Port Carbon has a population of 611 males, and 501 females. Total, 912. Fourteen or fifteen months ago, there was but one house in the place.

Plenty.—So bountiful in Georgia are the products of the early grains, and so rich the promise of the crops not gathered, that wheat is selling at fifty cents per bushel, and Indian corn at 12½ cents per bushel.

It may not be amiss to remind our readers, that the article in manufactured to perfection at the Maryland Chemical Works, and may be obtained in any quantity at the warehouse in South street. [Bell, Pat.]

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE BRITISH ROYAL FAMILY.

George Lewis, twenty-eighth male descendant from Woden the Saxon, ascended the British throne A. D. 1714, with the title of George I, and died after a reign of seventeen years. History accords to him neither public greatness nor private worth. He left a son and a daughter. His son, George II, ascended the throne on the demise of his father, 1727; he reigned thirty-three years, and died in 1760. His daughter, Dorothy, married Frederick William I, king of Prussia, and died two sons and five daughters. His eldest son, Frederick Lewis, Prince of Wales, died before his father: as did three of his daughters. But Frederick Lewis left a son, who ascended the throne, with the title of George III, in 1760, in his father's right, on the death of his grandfather. George III, had thirteen children, the eldest of whom, two are dead, and ten remain. George IV, now fills the throne—three are dead, and ten remain. George V, ascended the throne 1820—was born August 12, 1763, and of course is nearly 66 years of age. He had but one child, a daughter, Charlotte, who was married to Prince Leopold, of Saxony Coburg. She died A. D. 1817, without issue. Her uncle Frederick, Duke of York, then became heir apparent to the Crown; but he dying in 1820, without legal issue, left his brother William, Duke of Clarence, heir apparent. The Duke of Clarence has a daughter (Elizabeth) nine years of age, his presumptive heir in the right. Should she die without issue, the Crown next belongs to the Princess Victoria, 11 years of age, daughter of the Duke of Kent, deceased; and in her default, it will finally reach a son of the Duke of Cambridge—these being the only prescriptive heirs in the British family among the grand children of George III—and should this family become extinct, another branch of the German line must be called to the throne. [Pautucket Chron.]

A specimen of unsophisticated simplicity, in the shape of a huge red-faced countryman in a smock-frock and cart-whiskers, presented himself to one of the officers of Lambeth-street, on Wednesday, and with a sheepish grin thrust a letter into his hand, directed to the Priest's office, 'Witchaple.' The officer read the contents, which turned out to be a recommendation from some overseer in the country for the bearer to be admitted in the New Police. 'Ees,' said the countryman, 'I becom'd of purpose to be a polish man. I am consider'd a mortal cuite lad in our parnts, and zo measter says to 1-ther be ten thousand watchmen wanted in London city, and thee best lad for them beiven chaps. So I gett me a chape and a bludgeon' (displaying a formidable bludgeon) as they may want leather 'o' dit' and coom'd straignt from Brenchly. It actually appeared that the man had walked that distance in the full confidence of being immediately elected in the New Police. As nothing could be done for him in this office, he appeared again, 'you must leave the house with me to-night, and do your part in helping off this luggage.' In truth, I will,' answered she, 'and care not how soon I'm quit of it.' At this instant the measured tread of the watchman was heard, and shortly after there came a slight tap at the window. The man motioned her to be silent.—

"It is either the watchman or one of my comrades," whispered he, "at any rate we had best blow out the light." We must clear the watch, that's certain; and Joe Simms, too, if we can, for I rather guess it is his signal; and if I answer it, we shall have to go snaks in our prize—What say? Suppose we stop an hour or so? he will then think I did not succeed in getting hold of his application. [London paper.]

The U. S. ship Concord, Captain M. C. Perry, having on board Mr. Randolph, our Minister to Russia, and Mr. Clay, his Secretary, dropped down to Hampton Roads sometime before Monday last, and was expected to proceed that day to sea, bound to Russia. Dr. Heerman goes out as passenger in her to join the Mediterranean Squadron.

Before Mr. Randolph's embarkation, a Public Dinner was given to him at Norfolk, at which the Mayor of the Borough of Norfolk presided, assisted by four other highly respectable gentlemen. Amongst the guests, were Mr. Tazewell, the Senator from the State, and Mr. Layall, the Representative of the District in Congress. [Nat. Intel. of July 2.]

The U. S. ship Boston went to sea on the 29th ult. from New York for Algiers, having on board Com. Power, the new Consul to that Regency.

desire to ask one of these made-up to order young men, how he could afford it? And he told me, looking complacently upon his square-toed boots, and glancing an eye at his store door, 'I presume you know we receive a compensation for our attendance here.'

THE IRISH HEROINE.

The following story was related to me by a person who was assured of its truth.

About four years since a gentleman, residing in B— street,

New-York, left the city, as was often accustomed to do on Saturday night, to visit his friends in the country, and return on Monday morning.

His wife usually preferred remaining at home with her children, trusting the charge of the house to two female domestics, in whom she placed the most implicit confidence.

The custom of washing early, obliged Ellen, a sprightly Irish girl, to make due preparation for the event on Sunday evenings;

such as filling the boiler and gathering fuel upon the hearth.

For this purpose, when the family had retired, she descended a few steps into an adjoining cellar, and on approaching a large box in which coals were deposited,

she saw with astonishment a man crushed within it, glaring upon her with a countenance of savage wildness.

By the glitter of steel which flashed in the lamplight, she promptly concluded that his purpose was robbery and perhaps murder.

Of course, the shriek

which her terrified feelings could ill suppress, would prove her death.

Determined, therefore, to conceal every emotion of fear, she calmly asked,

"Who are you?" The man sprang out, and pointed a pistol to her breast.

"Your life," said he, "or assist me in robbing this house. This is the only condition of your safety. You know where the plate and other valuable articles are deposited, and if you do not immediately show me, I will blow your brains out!" "Oh, stay—and if that be all," said she, feigning a laugh, "trot

I'm the one right willing to tell ye that—for I likes neither the maister nor mistress, chick nor child, in the house. And sure if ye going halves me, I'll show ye all, I will."

The man put up his pistol, and gazed steadily at her, as if doubtful whether she might be trusted. "Come then, all shines," said he roughly, "and if you make a breath of noise, you know what to depend on." "An' faith, an' I still am an oyster?" "In ye are making all the noise?" "Lead on," said he.

They then ascended the stairs to the dining room. Ellen pointed him to a portable desk and a small trunk beneath the side-board. "There's maister man put up his pistol, and gazed steady-ly at her, as if doubtful whether she might be trusted.

"Well thought of," replied Ellen,

and blew out the lamp.

The man returned to the pantry to bring out the bags, &c.

VIRGINIA FREE PRESS.

THE FREE PRESS.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1830.

The Anniversary of American Independence was celebrated at Harper's Ferry, on Saturday the 3d, and Monday the 5th inst.

We to-day publish the proceedings. They did not appear last week, because they were not received until after our paper was put to press.

At a meeting of the Managers of the Charleston Anti-Slavery Colonization Society, held on the 19th day of June, 1830, the following gentlemen were added to the Board of Managers, in pursuance of a resolution adopted at the last annual meeting of the Society, viz:

William Yates, Lee Griggs,
William Stowell, James Shirley, Jr.,
Richard H. Jackson, Samuel C. Seward,
Edward H. Fry, Thomas A. Moore,
William Graham, George W. Hammond,
James Brown.

A large meeting was held in Lexington, Ky., on the 21st ult., at which resolutions were adopted, disapprobatory of the veto upon the Mayville and Rockville road bills, and of the conduct of their Senators, Bibb and Roane, in voting on several questions contrary to the known wishes of their constituents.

The harvest in this neighborhood was finished last week, and it is enough to cover the eye and the heart, to see the extent of the destruction upon the wheat fields by which we are surrounded.

The latest accounts from England leave no hopes of the King's recovery. His disease is said to be dropsy, and although he has obtained relief by the operation usually called tapping, all private accounts agree that his dissolution is rapidly approaching. His brother who will succeed him, is said to be very unpopular, and after him, the throne will belong to the daughter of the Duke of Kent, now nine years of age. Under these circumstances, the death of George the Fourth will be a most melancholy event for the people of Great Britain.

COMMUNICATION.

Mr. EDWARD: The conveyance of Washington city with the Cumberland or Great Western National Road, has for many years been a favorite and important object. The recent rejection of the bill appropriating money towards filling up the gap between Rockville and Frederick, has dampened the hopes of the Marylanders very materially. But the old adage, "Tis an ill wind which blows nobody good," comes forcibly to mind, when looking at the bearing of this rejection in all its aspects. If the hopes of some are destroyed, why may not the hopes of others be renovated?

It is now pretty well ascertained, that the Smithfield and Harper's Ferry Road will soon be constructed, and it is confidently believed, that the people of Hampshire and Berkley will make the Road from the Bloomery Gap to Smithfield. These done, the eye naturally turns to the gap between Harper's Ferry and Leesburg, a distance not exceeding 18 miles in a direct line. Already has a good road been made along the Potomac, at the base of the mountain and along the bluffs, as far as Peacher's mill, a space of about four miles.

Could not an appropriation by Congress, of a small sum to aid the Road from Leesburg to Harper's Ferry, be asked with great confidence? Is it not a National work in every sense of the word? While it would render the communication of the government with the Army, a matter of great ease and convenience, it would serve to connect the Cumberland Road with Washington, and render the distance from 20 to 25 miles shorter than the Maryland route.

Let me, then, recommend to the people of Loudoun, immediately to take measures for raising a company to improve the road from Leesburg to Harper's Ferry. Let them apply to the next Legislature for a law of incorporation; let them appoint a committee to petition Congress for aid; let them put their shoulders vigorously to the wheel, and success will certainly crown their efforts. An appropriation of $20,000 per annum, on a truly national scale, could not and would not be resisted. Such a law, passed by Congress, would unquestionably receive the signature of the President, because he does not deny the power of Congress to apply the national funds to objects indisputably national in their character.

It seems to me, that an application of the kind mentioned, would meet with prompt encouragement. Let it be made. Success will be productive of incalculable benefits; and a failure can do us no injury. The spirit of improvement should be cherished. Zeal in such a cause is praiseworthy at least; and may prove profitable. A friend of good Roads,

DAN LEE, c. c.

Commissioner's Office, Charlestown, July 22, 1830.

After intervening intervals, we are satisfied, that I shall, at the office appointed, on Saturday the 25th day of July next, receive you under the seal of the above order, and continue to do so, to day until my report be completed, and where they will attend with necessary papers.

the time the road is finished to Harper's Ferry, the canal will have reached that place; the produce of many of our farmers thus brought within one day's wagging of it, and a saving of more than half a dollar in every barrel of flour effected. This will cause the road to be greatly travelled, not only by the people of this county, but by all the adjoining counties. It will be the outlet for the great valley, and just become a perfect thoroughfare. Many persons going to the district will prefer it, as they can reach Harper's Ferry in stages in 4 or 5 hours, there to the canal, and be in Washington in 20 hours thereafter, without much fatigue. The scheme unquestionably offers one of the best chances for the profitable investment of capital that we can form any idea of. We have not the least doubt that the next legislature of Virginia will authorize the making of the long-talked of road from Winchester to Parkersburg, which will open the most direct communication from the district to the western and south-western states. An immense amount of travelling would thus be at once drawn to the Smithfield turnpike, and which would continue to increase as the population of the west and their business intercourse with the east increased. Would it not be good policy in the subscribers to the Northern turnpike, in this country, that company having expired by the expiration of its charter last spring, to transfer their subscriptions to this road, that may be made in the best possible manner? We might afterwards make the branch from the Parkersburg road to Cumberland.

LEESBURG, JULY 10.
We record with sorrow the following melancholy occurrence:—Mr. Henry Peers, inn-keeper of this town, aged about 40 years, at an early hour on Sunday morning last, in a state of mental derangement, precipitated himself from his chamber window, upon the pavement beneath, a distance of some 18 or 20 feet.—His skull was so badly fractured by the fall, that he survived only about three hours.—His remains were interred in the Presbyterian burial ground on the following day, attended by a large concourse of citizens.—The deceased, though unmarried, has left many respectable friends and relatives to mourn his untimely fate. [Genius of Liberty.]

The collection taken in this town, on Sunday last, in aid of the funds of the Colonization Society, were, we understand, (in round sums,) as follows:

In the Methodist Church, $52 00

" Episcopalian, " 22 00

" Presbyterian, " 9 00

lb.

Fatal Accident.—On Monday, the 5th instant, as Mr. Samuel Houston was riding in his gig upon the Washington road, as the wheels struck the bridge at the first toll-gate, the gears suddenly gave way, the shafts fell, and the horse started with such violence as to throw Mr. Houston head foremost about ten feet, which deprived him of life almost instantly on the spot. [Hall Patriot.]

SUSSEX, (Northumberland Co. Pa.) June 20.
Melancholy Occurrence.—On Friday night, the 18th instant, the large two-story house of Mr. George Dunkelberger, of Swover-creek, in the East end of this county, was entirely consumed by fire, supposed to be the act of an incendiary; and what renders it more distressing, four of his children, who were asleep at the time in the upper part of the house, were burnt to death. The elder was about eighteen years of age, and the youngest about eleven. The next day a mark of their remains were interred in one coffin. The remainder of his family, consisting of a mother, a wife, a son, and two daughters, with himself, barely escaped; the two daughters by jumping out of a window in the second story.

FROM THE OHIO REPOSITORY.
DEED,

At Canton, Ohio, on Saturday evening the 19th of June, of a lingering pulmonary consumption, Mrs. MARGARET MORROW, wife of Rev. James B. Morrow, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of that place, aged 50 years.

Her only surviving child of William and Elizabeth Morrow, who, many years ago, emigrated from Herkimer County, N.Y., to the neighborhood of Cannonsburg, Pa., where the subject of this notice was born. At an early period of her earthly existence, she was deprived, by death, of both her parents; but he who is the father of the fathers, kindly provided her protection in a home, and family, and hence of her. When yet young, she became too weak for the God of her fathers; and in her 16th or 17th year, gave very pleasing evidence of the faithfulness of God to his promise, that those seek his ear shall find him. Her mortal piety, even after distinctly recollecting her character, was remarkable; and her profession secured the esteem and affection of all who obtained her acquaintance.

She died, made for the last 5 years, slow but certain advances, and resisted every effort to arrest it. But, during the whole period of her affliction, she experienced the consolations of that religion which she was not ready to compare with the glory which still reigned over us.

The last eight weeks of her life was a period of much bodily distress and suffering, yet also contemplated death with Christian composure and resignation: he was dissolved by his terror. Many of her Christian friends, on visiting her, received from her lips earnest exhortations to be faithful and courageous in their trials.

She was not professed, she entered, without delay, into the service of the Saviour, pointing them to the great encouragement which they had to do. She felt much concern for the interests of religion in that town, and expressed a hope that God might yet be glorified by diffusing the knowledge of the people more to be faithful and courageous in their trials.

She also felt deeply solicitous for certain young persons whom she named, and hoped the Lord would change their hearts.

TO THE PUBLIC.

F. W. SPRENGER,
Druggist and Apothecary,

RESPECTFULLY informs his friends and the public generally, that he lately received a fresh supply of genuine DRUGS AND MEDICINES, comprising, also, a variety of New Medicines, or Preparations, according to Dr. M. Majendie's Formulary, and many other articles too numerous to mention here.

Paints, Oils, Dye Stuffs, &c.

Of the finest quality, as usual, which now make his assortment equal to any establishment this side of Baltimore.

It is true, he does not offer the articles at "Cheapside," but he assures the public, that they shall hold lower than they can ever be bought at Cheapside, or any other Side West of Baltimore. Nor, indeed, has he a practising Physician to put up such prescriptions as the intelligent gentlemen of the faculty may direct, but he can, without egotism, say, that no prescription, not even one from this scientific discipline of Esculapius, should be returned for the want of ability to comprehend, or daring to put up. He served a regular apprenticeship to the business in Europe, and now contemplates sticking or going through. And thinks that other gentlemen should attend to that which nature cut him off.

Cookmaker, stick to your last, is very good advice to all who would oversee the bounds of their understanding.
