

WEEKLY

AND FARMERS' REPOSITORY.

CHARLESTOWN, JEFFERSON COUNTY, THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1832.

NO. 15.

THE FREE PRESS.

A great Fair Meeting was held in Philadelphia on the 23rd inst. and about 4000 persons were present. The day was inclement, which prevented many from attending. The Hon. Joseph Hemphill presided. The meeting strongly opposed the bill of the Secretary of the Treasury. It seems to have been attended by distinguished men of both the Jackson and Anti-Jackson parties.

The "Old Farmers," engaged in the perilous enterprise attendant upon the settlement of the Western country, under BOON, CLARK, and others, spread about the first of November, 1783, to meet that day after years, (some of them as strikers), and partake of a festival dinner. November next will be the period for re-assembly. Gen. Simon KARRIS, of Kentucky, one of the survivors, is now besting the call to his compatriots—and is likely to gather together an interesting group of old warriors. The month of October is the spot selected.

A Mr. Casey has invented a self-operating lottery and obtained a patent. He ought not to have allowed one—for the invention is not new; it began with creation itself. Life is a self-operating lottery, of classes innumerable—two blanks to a prize.

In Mr. Adams' Report, we find the following facts, which show how light are our public burdens:

The representative population of the United States, at the close of the year 1831, just expired, somewhat exceeded eleven millions of souls. The gross amount of revenue levied upon them during the same year, may be set down in round numbers at twenty-two millions of dollars. Supposing it to have been raised by a poll tax, it would have amounted to an average of two dollars a head. During the same year, in the Island of Great Britain, upon a population of about sixteen millions, there was levied by taxation, about two hundred and forty millions of dollars, or about sixteen dollars a head.

the deck of his vessel, whenever the same shall be navigated at night. These are the principal provisions of the bill, and appear to us to be wise and salutary.—Acc. Gaz.

Besides the large quantity of Granite that is daily coming in upon the Baltimore and Ohio Rail-road, we notice the arrival of Quincy Granite from Boston, and White Granite from Hallowell, Maine, intended for fronts of buildings in Baltimore street. We observe also the introduction of beautiful white Marble, from Baltimore county.—Baltimore Patriot.

The Monument about to be erected to the memory of the Mother of Washington, by Mr. S. E. Burrows, of New York, is to be forty-five feet in height, of pure marble, and surmounted with a bust of Washington, presented by Col. Howard of Baltimore. The New York Journal of Commerce says that the architectural design is admirable. There is to be no other inscription than simply—
MARY, the mother of WASHINGTON.

Miscellaneous.

Mrs. Chapman.—The following very curious anecdote may be relied on as strictly true. A few days since, a travelling bookseller, took a supply of "the trial of Mrs. Chapman," recently published by Mott & Son, and started up to Bristol, in the steamboat, with the view to return to Philadelphia by the turnpike. On his way back, he came to Andalusia. It so happened that he was not aware of Mrs. Chapman's residence there. Accordingly, he presented himself at the house of that individual, to know if she would like to buy a copy of Mrs. Chapman's Trial. The inmates of the house immediately set up a hooting and hissing, and compelled the astonished vendor to back out without delay or remembrance. He pursued across the turnpike, and was not allowed to return until he had books to the wrong market.

Dr. Clark's Intelligence.

Miner.—A gentleman who has been some time resident at Frederick, informs the editor of the Barnstable Patriot, that Mina is the illegitimate son of a very rich gentleman of Cuba. He was not allowed, however, to take the name of his father, but lived with his mother's relations and bore her name. He was the perpetrator of a murder in his native place, and in consequence, clandestinely put on board a vessel bound to Boston, which was his first introduction into this country.

A friend called yesterday and showed to us a small printed sheet, dressed in the usual garb of newspaper mourning. It was entitled "Third and last Supplement to the Maryland Gazette, of the tenth instant." It is dated Annapolis, October 31, 1765.

Mr. James Green, editor and publisher, gives notice that the act of Parliament impose such intolerable burthens upon newspapers, that he is compelled to give up his paper, which he will recommence when parliament shall remove the stamp duties.

The paper recommends an attention to domestic manufactures as a means of domestic wealth. One corner of the sheet is ornamented with a clever-looking death's head and cross bones by the side of which is the following pithy inscription:—"The times are dreadful, dismal, deplorable, and dollar-less."—Phil. U. S. Gazette.

THE RUBY LIPS MUST KISS THE BRIM.

BY DANIEL WOODWORTH, ESQ.
The ruby lips must kiss the brim,
Before I drain the cup,
Its lustre dies will be too dim
To light my spirits up.
Nay, taste, my love, its purple hue
Will brighten, please thy eye,
Thine eye will gain new lustre too,
Thy soul new ardor—sip.
If only wine have power to cheer
The regents of the sky,
It sure will chase away the fear
That dims an eye's eye.
Then, taste, my love, its purple hue
Will brighten, please thy eye,
Thine eye will gain new lustre too,
Thy soul new ardor—sip.

Monkey Gleaners.—Chinese ingenuity is said to have succeeded in teaching monkeys to gather tea, and those spots which are not accessible to man but at the hazard of life. The monkeys clamber up to the tea plants, gather the green leaves from between the branches, and throw them down to those who are standing below. In order to entice them, they are given their masters to throw up food to them from time to time. There it sits another useful lesson, which the Chinese have taught them. The labourer drives a herd of monkeys who congregate in the mountain wilderness, a part of the mountain which abounds in the tea-plant, and then sets about worrying and hunting them. The monkeys in their retreat break off the tenderest branches of the plant, and throw them at their pursuer, who gathers them forthwith under his arm with thanks for the shower of missiles.

Sketches of Character.

We extract the following interesting items from "Memoirs of the Empress Josephine." The volume presents the most precious memoirs in a character truly amiable. But the extracts refer more particularly to the career of the wonderful man with whom she had been connected, and whose God-sent mission she had followed.

Josephine did not accompany Napoleon to Erfurt. In the latter showed his usual serenity and serenity. "We have therefore little to do with this really interesting passage in the life of Napoleon, which recalls more nearly than any event in modern history our ancient recollections of the field of the cloaks of gold, and other brilliant meetings of the sovereigns of the olden time." The following incident, however, is of no singular nature, so well authenticated, and at the same time new, we believe, to the English reader, that it may well find a place here. The most celebrated actors of the French Revolution, the Convention, the Directory, the Consulate, the Empire, were assembled on a platform erected on the usual station of the orchestra, on account of Alexander's weak hearing. The pit was filled with the most distinguished names of the French Revolution, and the Emperor, who sat in the front row, bathed in silent tears; for he could not speak. Fortunate would it have been for all had he laid the advice to flight.

From the "Court and Camp of Napoleon."

The eldest of Napoleon's brothers, was born at Corte, on the 7th January, 1768. He finished his education at the College of Autun in France, and returned to Corsica, in 1791. He became President of the District of Ajaccio, in 1792. He was appointed a member of the Directory of the department. In 1793, he quit Corsica and returned to France, where he was appointed commissioner to the army of Dagonat. In 1794, he married Mademoiselle Julie Clary, daughter of one of the richest merchants of Marseilles, and in 1795, was elected a member of the Council of 500. In 1798, he took his seat and was appointed Secretary. He is described as being "polite and affable, of a cool and steady disposition, intrepid, sagacious, and peculiarly qualified for civil and diplomatic employments. By his personal exertions and influence, he contributed to the success of that revolution, which, on the 9th November, 1799, placed his brother at the head of the consular government. He was appointed by Napoleon, a member of the Council of State, and minister plenipotentiary, to conclude a treaty of peace and commerce with the United States of America. The treaty was signed at Montfontaine, in September, 1800.

In 1801, he concluded a treaty of peace with the Emperor of Germany. On the 25th of March, 1802, he concluded a treaty of Peace at the Congress of Amiens, between France and England. On the 30th of March, 1803, he was proclaimed King of Naples, and the two Sicilies; which throne he relinquished at the solicitation of Napoleon, and was appointed King of Spain. He crossed the Spanish frontiers, on the 9th July, 1808. Napoleon's conduct toward J. caused him to hesitate several times, on quitting Spain, but his influence was such as to induce him to remain. On his quitting Spain, he returned to Paris, and during the regency of the Empress Maria Louisa, the honours of the military command were conferred on him. After the abdication of Napoleon, he retired to Switzerland, where he remained until March, 1815, when, after the return of Napoleon from Elba, he joined him with his children at Paris on the 22d of March.

After Napoleon's defeat at the battle of Waterloo, Joseph retired to the United States, where he now resides at him whom she had loved so well, for whose sake she had done and suffered so much, took place during their excursion to Strasbourg. The observations of Marshal Lannes on his way to Germany. Here the emperor remained for some time, attended by the Queen of Westphalia, an amiable woman, whom she greatly esteemed, Hortense and her children, the Princess Stephanie and her husband, all of whom had affectionately hastened to cheer the solitude of the empress, and to return to Paris, as it were, by necessity.

Meanwhile, Napoleon was pursuing, with less than usual celerity, his adventurous career. But the details of the last Austrian campaign, the battles of Ratisbon, Vienna, Essling, and Wagram, are fully given in other works. In October, the treaty of Schoonbrunn closed the contest, to the advantage of Napoleon, but the war had cost many brave men to France, had been unpopular there, and became, in the end, one main cause of all his future misfortunes, by placing an Austrian princess on the throne of Josephine. The observations of Marshal Lannes, who fell at Essling, and whom some writers have, with cruel absurdity, represented as rushing out of life like a bolterous ruffian and blasphemer, expressed on these subjects the sentiments of the whole French army. The evening before his death, which happened after eight days of agony, endured with fortitude and resignation, he said to an attendant, "I feel myself dying. Tell the emperor I would see him once more." The messenger was about to leave the wretched man, when he, speaking as if with a right to express the truth, and I have no fear that my using the privilege now will influence hereafter your dispositions towards them. You have committed a great fault in exposing the present war. It has deprived you of your best friend; but it will not correct you. Your ambition is insatiable, and will prove your destruction. You recklessly throw away, and without necessity, the lives of the men who serve you most faithfully; and when they die, you do not regret them. You remain long, but you do not live. You are forsaken. Guard your disposition for war. It is the curb which you can never be more powerful, but you may be much less beloved. Napoleon's dying words were: "I am dying, but I shall live again."

German poetry. At the commencement of the French revolution he came to Paris, where he was gulfed in during the reign of terror.—Lord Dover's Life of Frederick the Second.

ORIGINAL LETTER FROM GENERAL WASHINGTON.

When our capital was destroyed last June, it will be recollected that the papers of the various Offices of the Government were thrown into general confusion, to remedy which disorder, however, provision was made by the last Legislature. On looking over this mass of documents, a few days since, the following letter was discovered, being in the proper hand writing of General Washington, and addressed "to the Governor and Council of the State of North Carolina." In reply, as it would seem, to one from them, approving, in the name of the State, of the recently formed General Government, and of his Administration of it. Like every thing else, proceeding from the pen of that incomparable man, it is distinguished for its chasteness of style and elevated patriotism. The spirit of devotion of the Union which it breathes, and the high estimate entertained of its value by the writer, render its publication at this moment peculiarly interesting.

To the Governor and Council of the State of North Carolina. GENTLEMEN: I treat you to be persuaded that nothing could have been more agreeable to me, than the proofs contained in your affectionate address of the friendly sentiments entertained by you for my person, and for the Government which I have been appointed by my countrymen to administer. And I reciprocate, with heartfelt satisfaction, your congratulations on the completion of the Union of all the States; an event, in my judgment, pregnant with more salutary consequences than can easily be expressed or conceived.

It will ever be my first wish and most strenuous endeavor, to justify, so far as may be in my power, the confidence which my fellow citizens have thought proper to repose in me, by exerting every power vested in the President of the United States by the Constitution, for the happiness and prosperity of our Country, and by my efficacy to such a system as will ensure the general welfare and conciliate the public mind.

I desire, gentlemen, to make acceptable to you my acknowledgments for the kind concern you take in the restoration of my health and preservation of my life, and in the retribution I may receive after the conclusion of my mortal existence. May you, and the State in whose government you have the principal agency, be also the peculiar objects of Divine Providence. GEO. WASHINGTON, United States, Aug. 20th, 1790.

Bordentown, in New Jersey. His time is principally spent in embellishing the spot which he has selected, as a retirement; his solitude sweetened by the possession of a conscience void of offence.

BARON TRENCK.

The famous Baron Trenck, it is known to have lived with the youngest sister of Frederick the Great, and to this the unrelenting barbarity of the king is commonly attributed. He escaped from Glatz, and took service successively with the Russians and Austrians. Many years afterwards, in 1754, as he was passing through Dantzic he was treacherously given up to the Prussian government, and was sent to the fortress of Magdeburg. Here he was confined for nearly ten years, with circumstances of the most aggravated cruelty. He was placed in a damp dungeon, loaded with irons of sixty-eight pounds weight, almost starved to death, and, finally, tortured, by being waked during slumbers every half hour. This overwhelming misery did not, however, break his spirit; assisted by the pity of the soldiers who guarded him, he contrived to send letters to the Princess Amelia, and to others of his friends. By these means he obtained money with which he bribed the soldiers, to procure him files and other tools, as well as lights, pens and paper. His various attempts to escape are very curious, as well as the herculean labors he went through in the progress of them. Suffice it to say, not one of them was successful; but that he was finally released, towards the end of the year 1763, partly from the representations to her brother of the Princess Amelia, and partly in consequence of his having succeeded in bribing the imperial minister at Berlin, who demanded his liberty as an officer in the Austrian service. He afterwards passed a turbulent and discontented life; always engaged in literary and scientific pursuits, he succeeded in publishing a number of works, and was, by treachery and chicanery, assisted by others. He became, at different times, a prisoner, and was confined in the Bastille, and in the dungeons of the German poetry. At the commencement of the French revolution he came to Paris, where he was gulfed in during the reign of terror.—Lord Dover's Life of Frederick the Second.

The Monitor.

From the Journal of Humanity. A DRUNKARD'S DEATH. Did you ever see a drunkard die?—Never.—Then you never saw the most heart-rending, awful scene that ever transpired upon earth. I once saw a drunkard die. It was many years since, but the dreadful night is still as distinctly before me, as though it were but yesterday; and so vivid an impression did it make upon my mind, that I fear it will never be effaced.

He had once been a sober and happy man. His business prospered, his prospects flattering, his family—as lovely a family as ever existed this side of Heaven—were all that he could wish. The sun never shone on more love, peace and happiness, than were found round that fireside.

But in an evil hour, he tasted the poisonous cup, and all was lost. He became a drunkard. Oh that last hour,—the last hour of the destroyer of himself, the hopes of his friends, and the prospects of his family,—of him who had deliberately brought a blighting curse upon all that was beautiful. As he lay upon his bed groaning under the burden of a guilty conscience, and his family—they were still lovely, although reduced to beggary by his infernal appetite,—gathered weeping around his bed, I came into the room. "Doctor," said he, "do you believe there is a hell?—a hell?" laying a strong emphasis upon the last word as he repeated it. "I certainly do," I replied. "I know there is," rejoined he. "I know there is, for I feel it here—laying his hand on his breast—I feel it here; the worm that can never die, the fire that can never be quenched, eternal punishment, endless torments. I feel them, they have begun to be my portion, even in this world." I suggested to him that the mercy of God was infinite, and would be extended even to the drunkard who repented.

time of repentance is gone forever! I can reflect on my treatment to my wife, on my dreadful abuse of my children, on my neglect of my duties, on my noble feeling, and still not be moved—not be penitent. The day of repentance is past—there is no hope! I am lost—I am lost!" Horror struck with his expressions of despair, and with the agony depicted in the countenance of his wife, and the bursts of grief from his children, I knew not what to say. He lay silent for a few minutes, and then again burst forth into the most blasphemous expressions of horror and despair; and these were followed by a cry, as if coming from the world of wo, for rum; "Give me some rum! give me some rum!" Fearing that in his paroxysm of rage he might spring from his bed, and do injury to those around, as he had on similar occasions exhibited more than human strength, I ordered it to be given him. His wife brought it to his bedside. Raising himself upon his pillow, and seizing the tumbler with a convulsive grasp, in both his hands, he made an ineffectual attempt to carry it to his mouth. Enraged at his repeated failures, occasioned by high excitement of his nervous system, he uttered a dreadful oath, and called on his wife for assistance. She turned from soothing the distress of her youngest child, a beautiful little girl of some four or five years old, whose excessive grief had drawn the attention of the mother even from the dying husband—to afford him her aid; but ere she could reach the bed, with a fiendish spite, he dashed from him the tumbler, and muttering, Damnation! damnation! fell back and expired. G. K.

"DON'T SCREAM."

It was one of the rules laid down by the British Conference, that no preacher should preach oftener than twice on a week day or three times on a Sabbath. Mr. Wesley, advised his preachers to avoid long sermons; and more than once in his Journal he has recorded the death of men, who were martyrs to long and loud preaching. In a letter to one of his followers on this subject, he writes, "Scream no more at the peril of your soul. God now warns you to be silent. He says, 'I will not hear you, but do not scream.' Speak with all your heart, but with a moderate voice. It was said of our Lord, 'He shall not cry; the word probably means, 'He shall not scream.'—Herein be a follower of me as I am of Christ. I often speak loud, often vehemently, but I never scream. I never strain myself; I dare not; I know it would be a sin against God and my own soul."

There is no end of affliction taken in at the eyes only, and you may as well satisfy those eyes with seeing, as control a passion received by them only.

Congressional.

MONDAY, MAY 28. In the Senate, petitions were presented against the Tariff bill of the Secretary of the Treasury. The bill concerning the Bank of the United States, was further considered and debated.

TUESDAY, MAY 29. The Senate approved a bill for the relief of the Bank of the United States, and some other bills, and then resumed the Bank bill, to which several amendments were made.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 30. In the Senate, Mr. Dallas presented the proceedings of a meeting of the friends of the protective system, which was ordered to be printed. The Senate then proceeded to consider the bill for the relief of the Bank of the United States, which was ordered to a third reading.

THURSDAY, MAY 31. In the Senate, yesterday, the resolution offered by Mr. Kane, relative to the disbanding a part of the army of the United States, and substituting a corps of mounted men for the veterans of the Revolution, was ordered to a second reading.

FRIDAY, JUNE 1. The Senate, after acting upon a variety of unimportant local subjects, resumed the consideration of the U. S. States Bank bill, and after discussion, and the presentation of various amendments to the bill, the Senate adjourned.

SATURDAY, JUNE 2. In the Senate, the resolution offered by Mr. Benton yesterday, calling for the monthly returns of the U. S. States Bank for the months of April and May, was taken up and agreed to.

INDIAN WAR.—UNPLEASANT NEWS. A proof slip from the office of the Cincinnati Daily Gazette states that the steamboat Herald in seventy-four hours from St. Louis—an extraordinarily quick passage—brings a proclamation from the Governor of Illinois to the citizens of that State, from which it appears that a bloody and successful attack has been made by the Indians upon a detachment of volunteers.

FROM FRANCE.—THE CHOLERA. The Cholera appears by the official accounts to be diminishing in Paris, but spreading throughout France. A London paper of the 28th, says it has broken out at Havre de Grace. All the French Ministers have been attacked.

CHOLERA IN IRELAND. Liverpool, May 1.—In Ireland, and especially in the capital, the disease appears to be making considerable progress. On Friday 112 new cases were announced in Dublin, and the deaths from the commencement of the disease amount to 226.

At all the Catholic Churches in this city, it was on Sunday announced that a change had taken place in the law of abstinence, which has hitherto governed the population of this country, professing the Roman Catholic religion.

Baltimore Races.

The races over the Central Course commenced on Tuesday the 26th ult. and were numerous and fashionably attended. The first race was a sweepstakes, mile heats, entrance $100, half forfeit—seven subscribers, four paid forfeit—three started. The following is the result:

Col. W. E. Johnson's b. c. Hero Oline 1 1 G. G. Craig and F. P. Corbin's m. p. Billy Perrotti 2 2 Samuel W. Smith's c. h. f. Atlas 3 3 Time—1st heat 4m. 36s.—2d heat 3m. 55s.

THE WEATHER. BALTIMORE, JUNE 1. We learn that there was a slight fall of snow in this city on Wednesday night. The strong north-west winds and low temperature, which have prevailed during the last two days, certainly partake more of the character of the first days of spring than the opening of summer.

Slavery in Kentucky.—About fifty slaveholders in Kentucky, under conviction that there are insuperable obstacles to the general emancipation of the present generations of slaves, but equally convinced of the necessity and practicability of emancipating their future offspring, have agreed to meet at Lexington, on the fourth of July next, to form an association for that purpose.

Methodist General Conference.—This Conference has been in session in Philadelphia about three weeks. On Tuesday, the Rev. John Emory, D. D. of New York, and the Rev. F. O. Andrew, of South Carolina, were elected Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Tragedical.

Alaha, May 26th, the Superior Court of Harrison county, Va., William B. Bennett was found guilty of shooting, with intent to kill, his father-in-law, Maj. Silliman, and was sentenced to two years imprisonment in the penitentiary.

THE HORSE-SHOE. An incident occurred in the Senate Chamber, on Saturday last, which perhaps deserves notice. Whilst the Senate was in session, a piece of iron (part of a horse-shoe) was thrown from the gallery into the body of the Chamber, passing near the head of one or more Senators.

Horrible Murder.—Mr. Andrew Young, of Montgomery county, and his wife, were both murdered in a most shocking and brutal manner on Sunday last, by one of his own negro men. The circumstances so far as we have been able to learn them, are as follows:

MINA.—THE MURDERER. The Doylestown Republican says: "Mina has made his will, which has been taken to Philadelphia, and properly authenticated by the Spanish Ambassador. Among other legacies, we learn that he bequeathes five hundred dollars to the Sheriff of this county, and three hundred to each of his lawyers. His real name, as affixed to this instrument, is Carolina Estroda Entralgo.
