THE SPIRIT OF BEAUTY. Oh: said one, if you seek to know, You must gaze around, above, below, For earth and heaven and ocean tell there the Spirit of Beauty loves to dwell. But see, she comes with the early spring And winnows the air with her fragrant w Clothing each meadow, and hill, and tree, In the bloom of her rich embroidery Ask her now ere she pass away Where on earth she delights to stay,...

And the Spirit will pause, while eart Ring with tones of her glad reply— "Seek for me in the blue hare-bell, In the pearl depths of the ocean thell,
In the vesper dush of the dying day.
In the first faint glow of the morning ray;
Is sleep on the breast of the crimson rose.
And hide in the stately lift's snows;
I am found where the crystal dew-drops shin
No gem so bright in a diamond mine;
I bloom in the flower that decks the grave, And ride on the crest of the dark green way I'm up and away o'er earth and o'er sea,

I fan the air with the bird's light wing. My tents in the rainbow arch are set, And I breathe in the fragrant violet.

Look where you may, you will find me ther

For the spirit of Beauty is every where.

"Now listen to me—For, sooth to say,
There is one dear spot where I fain would stay.
I love all things in earth, sea, sky—
But my own best home is a maiden's eye!
Oh! I could linger for ever there. Nor sigh for another, a sphere more fair; Lurking for aye in her cheek's warm smile, Round her rosy lips with their playful wile; Roving at will through each golden curl, That waves o'er a brow like an Indian pearl and sinking at night to a blissful rest Mid the spotless snows of her fragrant breas me there, for 1-love full well. THE GRANDER AND SMUGGLER DAUGHTER, On, FIFTY YEARS AGO.

I am a Spaniard, and the only son and sole heir of Don Guzman de Mansoria, a grandee of Spain, of the second class, by whom I was educated according to my fortune and exalted rank. At the age of twenty-five I lost my father. It is the custom in Spain, that, at the death of a father, the nobles should wear mourning for one year, and pass that, time in a state of absolute solitude at their remotest estates. Lloved my father tenderly and-deeply regretted his loss; I observed bountry's custom on that event as a holy duty; and, is conformity thereto, removed into Arragon, where I had a castle situated at the foot of Moun Maladetta, on the extreme frontier etween Spain and France. where large quantities of grain finds its market from Pennsylvania, &c. The proposed
Rail Road contemplated from Chambersburg and passing through Hagerstown, to intersect the Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road at Weverton on the Potomac, will pass very near to this place. There is not much doubt but that the Antietam will be made navigable, so as to intersect the Chesapeuke and Ohi Canal at the Antictam Iron Works—as there is now a Jock at this place, built by the Potomac Company, which will pass a boat from the waters of the dam to the water be-

The Lots of Ground are situated in and adjoining Funkstown, being many of them-valuable building lots, and in a very high state of cultivation;
The Mansion House is a large and com-
