

Constitution which empowers Congress to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and fix the standard of value...

deprived of its power as well calculated for the circulation of a currency so great in amount, and having as vast an intercourse, commercial, social, and political, between all parts of our country...

banking power (as necessary and proper within the meaning of the Constitution) and consequently the Government has the right to exercise this power in any manner it may see fit...

proach of events which I have demonstrated, must, if not arrested, create convulsions and revolutions, and to correct a disease which must, if not corrected, subject the currency to continued agitation and fluctuations...

The Senate met at the usual hour. Their proceedings consisted simply of the adoption of the resolution of the House to appoint a joint committee...

Mr. Newman hoped it would meet the fate of the other like motion which preceded it, and moved its indefinite postponement...

The Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Delegates, charged by the joint resolution of the two Houses to inquire, &c., have, according to order, had the same under consideration...

Mr. Harrison offered the following resolution: Resolved, That the Select Committee on Banks collect and have printed in convenient form, for the use of the General Assembly, the evidence taken by the said Committee...

