

dependent on certain departments—the executive, the legislative, and the sacred offices of the judiciary. If any department were to be removed, the machinery of the Government would be broken down.

The President came yesterday and unexpected to the President. In a few days he will have no time to deliberate, as he informs us, and has not had during the session, with intense labor pressing upon him; and intimates that he will not have time to do so.

Mr. Gamble moved the previous question. And the main question (being on the passage of the bill) was ordered and being taken, resulted. Yes. The bill was passed.

THE CABINET.

The first disastrous result of the second veto of the President, was the resignation of the Cabinet, with the exception of Mr. Webster.

On Friday, Mr. Carrington, Attorney-General, and Mr. Ewing, Secretary of the Treasury, sent in their resignations; and on Saturday, Mr. Bell, Secretary of War, Mr. Babson, Secretary of the Navy, and Mr. Ganoan, Postmaster General, followed with their resignations.

Letter from John J. Crittenden.

Washington, Sept. 11, 1841. Sir: Circumstances have occurred in the course of your Administration, and chiefly in the exercise by you of the veto power, which constrain me to believe that my longer continuance in office as a member of your Cabinet will be neither agreeable to the public nor to the country, nor honorable to myself.

Letter from Thomas Ewing.

Washington, Sept. 11, 1841. Sir: After the most calm and careful consideration, and viewing the subject in all its aspects, I have concluded to resign the office of Secretary of the Treasury, and beg you to accept this as my letter of resignation.

Letter from Daniel Webster.

Washington, Sept. 11, 1841. Sir: After the most calm and careful consideration, and viewing the subject in all its aspects, I have concluded to resign the office of Secretary of the Treasury, and beg you to accept this as my letter of resignation.

to disturb the confidence of the public, and to excite the passions of the people. I have, therefore, concluded to resign the office of Secretary of the Treasury, and beg you to accept this as my letter of resignation.

On the morning of the 16th of August, I received from you a copy of the bill which you had introduced into Congress, and which you had caused to be printed.

Mr. Bell then expressed, in strong terms, his opinion that the bill was not in accordance with the purposes of Government, and that it was not in accordance with the wishes of the people.

Comments on the Second Veto.

Rumor had pretty well prepared the public mind for the receipt of the veto message of President Tyler, which arrived yesterday.

We look upon this message as a most extraordinary and unprecedented occurrence in the history of our country.

The President makes a great parade about his "moral and religious" duties, and his "oath to support the constitution."

momentary changes, and the boldest of all changes are perpetually undergoing. The arguments of the President against the bill, were so strong, and so well supported, that it was not possible to resist them.

These very distressing complaints often lead into Consumption through neglect at the first stage, and the patient is then obliged to use those means which are necessary to cure the disease.

Dr. William F. Alexander has invented a new and improved method of curing Consumption, and has published a book on the subject.

Notice.

The third quarterly meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Harpers-Ferry, will take place on Saturday the 24th of October.

The Rev. T. D. Hoopes, of the Presbyterian denomination, will preach at Harpers-Ferry, on the 11th day of September, 1841.

The Rev. Mr. Ewing, in the Intelligence of this morning, created a great agitation in the minds of the people.
