

CELEBRATION.

NEW YORK CUSTOM-HOUSE APPOINTMENT. The following is a sketch of the debate in the House on the 4th, in relation to the New York Custom-House Report.

The House proceeded to the consideration of the unfinished business of Saturday, being the motion of Mr. Wise to print the memorial of the President and the accompanying reports and documents from the Commissioners appointed to investigate the affairs of the New York Custom-House.

Mr. Underwood was entitled to the floor, and addressed the House at great length, mainly in an argument adverse to the constitutional power of the President to investigate such an important office, and then in some general remarks on the merits of the matter.

Mr. Underwood finished his remarks for the purpose of explanation, amongst other members to Mr. Everett, who in reference to that portion of Mr. U's argument which related to the reading of the Commission under which the investigation was ordered.

And the Commission was read accordingly. Mr. W. C. Johnson, in the same session, read the law of 1840, (known as the Sub-Treasury law) which was read. (Mr. J. J. Astor) did not attend the meeting of one of the Commissioners then present in the House.

Mr. J. J. Astor said that he did not derive the President's authority from the law of 1840, but that it rested on the clause in the Constitution which required the President to see that the laws be faithfully executed; and that it was well known that General Harrison had a Board of Commissioners to investigate the affairs of the Custom-House, and he had heard no complaint about it at the time, although the Extra Session was assembled here at the time.

At a subsequent period of his remarks, and while commencing upon the letter of the President to Gov. Pinckney, Mr. Underwood yielded to Mr. Peck, who stated that he had in his possession a copy of the whole letter of the President to Gov. Pinckney, which he called for.

Mr. Underwood. Let us have it. I want to keep nothing back. Mr. Peck. I do not have a private letter. Mr. Underwood. Let me see it. I want to see it. Mr. Peck. I will give you a copy of the original. Mr. Underwood. Let me see it. I want to see it.

From the National Intelligencer. FROM RHODE ISLAND.

The accounts last published by us respecting the late of the 31st of March, at which time the Suffrage House of Representatives, after having elected its Speaker and Clerks, had taken a recess to allow a committee to go through the ceremony of counting the votes thrown by their own party for Senators and officers of the State Government, as they desire it to be established under their new Constitution.

On re-assembling in the afternoon, both Houses of the illegitimate Assembly were organized, and Mr. Barr, their candidate, having been duly installed as Governor, read his own message to the Assembly, which is certainly a document of ample length.

Then the reading of the message had been concluded, a series of resolutions were adopted, to the effect that the President of the United States, the two Houses of Congress, and the Legislature of the several States, be notified by the Governor of the organization of the Government.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Harpers-Ferry Savings Institution, held on the 10th of May, 1842, the following resolutions were adopted:
