THE MARRIAGE.

Find the white-robed flowers in her hair; Soft be their shadow, soft and sweetly pale; For they are omens. May's anxious tears Are on the wreath that binds the bridal veil. The maiden leaves her childhood and her home, All that she has known of happy hours— Perhaps her bright eyes, 'till she be true, A faint was on her cheek, and on her brow; For they are pale as hope, and hope is pale; With earnest watching over future years; With all the promise of their loveliness; The bride and morning bathe their wreath with tears.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.

Oh! in our sterner mansion, when weary Of earlier sunshine glimmers on her vest, A smile with dim, and glow, and smile, A smile which tells the heart that she is still; Oh! if there be in retrospection's chain, One link that knits us with young days again, One thought so sweet, we rarely cherish mine, On all the hoarded raptures it reviews; Which seems each instant, in its back and brags, The heart to soften, and its ties to change, And every spring, untouch'd for years to more, It is—the memory of a MOTHER'S LOVE!

LITTLE THINGS.

Scorn not the slightest word or deed, Nor deem it void of power, or worth, There's fruit in each word waffled deed, Waiting its own hour.

A whispering word may touch the heart, And all the heart to life; A look of love bid sin depart, And still unholy strife.

No sea falls fruitless; none can tell How vast his power may be, Nor who will be rewarded well Within it, silently.

Work and despair not; give thy might, Nor care how small it be; God will with all that serve the right, The holy, true and free.

Miscellaneous.

WOMAN.

The Love that survives the tomb is one of the noblest attributes of the soul. It has its joys, it has its sorrows, its delights, and when the overwhelming burst of grief is calmed into the gentle tear of affection, then the sudden anguish and the conclusive agony over the present ruins of all that we most loved, is softened away into pensive meditation on all that was in the day of its loveliness. Who would root out such sorrow from the heart, though it may sometimes throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gayety, or spread a deeper sadness over the hour of gloom; yet who would exchange it ever for the song of pleasure or the burst of revelry? No, there is a remembrance of the dead to which we turn even from the charm of the living.

CONDENSED VIEW OF A GREAT MAN.

Dr. Samuel Johnson, one of the most eminent writers and critics of the last century, was introduced to him and advancing to take his hand, Johnson drew back, and put his hands behind him. When asked by a friend the reason, he said, "Sir, I will not shake hands with an infidel." When Hannah Moore inquired, if he did not think the Dean of Derry a very agreeable man, "Child," said he, "I will not speak any thing in favor of a Sab bath breaker." Still, with all his knowledge, his gigantic powers of mind, and his full conviction of the truth of revelation, and of the infinite importance of religion, it does not appear that he became truly wise until he had been brought to the close of his life. During his last illness, his clearness of death was for a time very great, but at length, through a humble trust in the Redeemer, his fears subsided, and he said, "The bitterness of death is past." After he had found peace in believing, he said for Sir John Reynolds to beg, as a dying friend, three favors of him:—First, that he would never part on the Sabbath; second, that he would relinquish to him thirty pounds which would enable him to change his room to a distressed family; third, that he would often read the Scriptures, and always on the Sabbath. With all which, it is said Sir John complied.

In his last hours Johnson said to his physician, "Dr. Brocklesby, you are a worthy man, and my friend, but I am afraid you are no Christian. What can I do better for you than offer in your presence a prayer to the Great God, that you may become a true Christian in every sense of the word?" He fell on his knees and said, "I believe in God, I believe in the Doctrines of the Bible, I believe in the Amen." Johnson continued, "My dear Doctor, believe a dying man; there is no salvation but in the sacrifice of the Lamb of God."

As Home, in his last hours, had made a bold declaration of his infidel opinions, Johnson was desired, in like circumstances, to make a confession of his faith. Seizing his pen, and enquiring what he would do, he said, "I offer my soul to the great and merciful God; I offer it full of pollution, but in full assurance that it will be cleansed in the blood of the Redeemer."

Having written for some minutes, he expressed something of his former dread of death. Sir John Hawkins, who was present, replied, "If you, Doctor, have these fears, what is to become of me and others?" "O sir," said he, "I have written this, but I have lived too much like other men."

Others, who had in common with all others, violated Heaven's righteous law; and could find no peace, no hope, but in humble penitence and cordial trust in the Atoning Saviour.

It is only worthy of esteem who knows what is just and honest, and dares to do it; that is a master of his own passion and scores to be the slave of another's. Such a one, in the lowest poverty, is a far better man, and merits more respect than those gay things who owe all their greatness and reputation to their riches.

MELANCHOLY IS INGRATITUDE TO HEAVEN.

Melancholy is ingratitude to Heaven. Is it not? This is a bright and fair, and joyous world, and yet, only one of probation. We are placed here by the Almighty Disposer of all, to enjoy all that is lovely and good; to know and feel so as to be able to appreciate pain as well as pleasure; for what value, health was never diseased? Who can feel for others' woes who himself never sorrowed or suffered?

We have enough of good here to be eternally thankful for. Let our conditions in life be what they may, we should not complain. Gloom and melancholy increase in indulgence, and something like envy is generally the cause. The wealthy are not more happy than the indigent.

We believe the God in some way or other, of this world's enjoyment and happiness. We believe the day laborer, whose health is good, is at least as happy as any man. We believe that none, except the desperately wicked, are deprived here or hereafter of a full share of happiness.

Then why should those who are disposed in this world to "do as they would be done by," cheer up one another. Let your neighbors, and assist in your needy brothers, friends and acquaintances, whenever it may be in your power. Should you not be paid here, you will certainly be hereafter. Acts of Charity, Friendship and Love, spread Joy and Gladness all over the land. The ebon, eschew Melancholy—it is ingratitude to Heaven!

THE BRITISH TARIFF.

The Buffalo Advertiser has the following sensible article upon the subject, which the duty falls exclusively upon the purchaser, and not on the producer. In all the reductions of the British Tariff, it will be noticed that England in no wise proposes to relax its protective character. Faithful to the principle of advancing her commercial prosperity, she relaxes or takes off altogether the duties on articles that do not enter into competition with her own products, and which are essential to her trade. Cotton, staves, ash, lard, and lard oil, she must have, and the cheaper she can get them by so much does she profit. To the South the news of the abolition of the duty on cotton will be particularly a cheering one to the market. It will give a firmer tone to the market. We shall be pleased to see how Southern politicians, of the Madisonian school, will make the fact square with their theory that duties are in all cases paid by the consumer. Cotton is a case precisely in point to favor the theory, if true. The South enjoys a monopoly of production; England must have the article; consequently, if Southern political economists are right, the duty must fall exclusively upon the English purchaser. It will be hard to maintain that theory in the face of an advance upon cotton at the South consequent upon the abolition of the duty.

SIDNEY SMITH.

The death of this distinguished writer and wit has taken away another of the connecting links between this age and the past. The school of philosophy and taste of which the Edinburgh Review at its first establishment was the organ, and of which SIDNEY SMITH was a disciple, still has its representatives and adherents; but the man who gave it its original impetus, and whose spirit philosophy is advancing; it is becoming transfused more and more into all the forms of literary development. The poetry of WORDSWORTH which was once the standing theme of ridicule for the wits of the Edinburgh, is now eulogized in that journal, and the name of the poet never mentioned but with respect and reverence.

In the now deep and profound range of thought into which the human mind seems to be entering, as the epoch now opening upon the world goes on to unfold itself, a man like SIDNEY SMITH would find himself removed from familiar ground. He was endowed with the exterior faculties of intellect and fancy. His wit lay at his tongue's end; his power as a writer was in the tips of his fingers. The current events of the day were every thing to him; and upon them he could descend with a quick eye for abuses, a keen sense of the ludicrous, and a strong common sense which gave remarkable force to his words, and which never deserted him.

Much of the charm of Sidney Smith's writings lay in the manner; but the matter was still more valuable. His views, if not strictly original, were in his day uncommon; and he had made them his own. He did not merely repeat what discoverers told him; he saw himself what they pointed out, and in his own way. He wrote only about what he thoroughly understood; he was master of his subject, and he was able to inculcate truths playfully, from the severe enunciation of which the public mind would have shrunk.

A suggestive fancy, and rare patience of elaboration came to the aid of his self-possession. But his talents were always regulated by good sense, and kept in subordination by earnestness of purpose. Even in his wildest license of burlesque he never transgressed the limits of good taste; and there was always meaning and a useful aim in his jokes. Few have pioneered so effectively the cause of reform in education, the law, and our political institutions, and of all the leaders of Liberal opinion, he alone perhaps never stopped to cougeer or compromise with the vulgar and mawkish cant of Exeter Hall.

Novel Sulky.—We have heard of steam buggies and steam sulkeys, but we have never, until yesterday, seen a sulky which runs on one wheel.

Mr. Remington, who is well known as highly ingenious in the mechanic art, is the inventor of this really modern sulky. This sulky is at Friend's Hotel, and will be exhibited to day, as will be seen by the bills.—Peterburg Int.

Items.

NOW IS THE TIME.

The reduction of postage on newspapers, to commence on the 1st of July, affords an additional inducement to subscribe to the Free Press. After that date, all subscribers within thirty miles of the office will be able to obtain their papers free of postage. This will save them 52 cents in the year, and to many may be deemed an item of importance.

Therefore, we trust that our friends in all quarters, who desire to see the circulation of the old firmly paper extended, will attend to this, and send us some additional names. We intend at an early day to give the paper a new dress, and this is the time to lend a helping hand.

Commodore Elliot.

The Commodore Elliot, the Globe says, has been promoted to the National Institute of Artillery, and he suggests that it be retained in the Institute, and that the remains of Commodore Elliot be deposited in the remains of the Roman Emperor, Alexander Severus. A very pretty piece of local patriotism.—N. Y. Express.

Some idea may be formed of the extent of our country with the Sandwich Islands from the fact that 314 American vessels with 6,434 seamen, and 1,100,000 dollars worth of goods, touched at the several islands between the 1st of January, 1844 and the 10th of October of the same year.

It is stated in some of the papers that there are no less than one hundred and twenty towns in Massachusetts utterly destitute of a grog-shop!

A Whole Hog.—The N. H. Courier says that Capt. Crook Merrill, of Andover, slaughtered a hog, hardly two years old, weighing about five hundred and 750 pounds, the largest hog ever slaughtered in New Hampshire.

Within eight years Englishmen have lent £50,000,000 to foreign states, on £30,000,000 of which it is not expected that either principal or interest will be paid, and on £20,000,000 more the payment is precarious.

It is stated in the English papers that the parcels of New Orleans Sugar, recently shipped to Liverpool, will probably pay a handsome profit. Since their importation the duties on Sugar has been reduced from 36 to 24 shillings per one hundred weight.

A Singular Development.—A most extraordinary affair has occurred at Toxtford, England. A person who had lived in the place more than half a century, part of the time as cook to a lady, and six years as the wife of Robert Welch, the parish clerk, died at the age of 83, and was discovered to be a man. He had regularly partaken the sacrament, and was religiously buried as "Sister Ann Welch." Many parties wished to keep the matter secret, but a woman named Fletcher, who was at the laying out, had sworn to the body being that of a man, and it would be difficult to keep the secret.

The Lead Business.—The value of the lead shipped from Glenage, Dubuque, and Snake Hollow, during the last year is estimated at $1,300,000, and is great.

Most Distressing Accident.—On the 17th inst. a man by the name of Mason, of Ceres, Pa. some 12 miles above Olean, was killed and had his legs burned off to the knees, while at work alone in his sugar bush, a short distance from his dwelling house. He had been boiling sap at the foot of a tree, and when his fire got getting low, he cut off a large oak log, and that it might roll against his kettle, thrust a handspike under one end of the log to direct its course away from the fire. The end of the log rolled on the handspike with such force as to crush Mason under it, and crowding his legs into the fire, he was burned off to the knees! Not returning to his home at evening, his family surmised that he could not be far, and they set out to look for him. They were not far from the place when they became so much alarmed on account of his safety, they went into the sugar bush in pursuit—and there found the poor man as described—limbless under the hand

Extraordinary Absent Mindedness.—A case is related of a lady in company a night or two since, when being waited up with a plate of refreshments, put them in her pocket. She did not discover her mistake till she found herself wiping her nose on the plate.

An Irish maid, boasting of her industrious habits, said the rose at four, made a fire, put on the tea kettle, prepared breakfast, and made all the beds before any one in the house was up.

"Pray, excuse me," said a well-dressed boxes at the theatre, "I wish to go upstairs and get some refreshment—don't leave your seat." A sailor seated in the box near his sweetheart, disposed to do the same, rose up, and said—"Harke, Moll, I'm going about to wet my whistle;

don't fall overboard while I am gone."

A man ran off with another man's wife, the other day, and stole four of his shirts at the same time. The bereaved husband says, if the runaway will agree to live with his wife he shall be welcome to the shirts.

"My dear," said a wife to her husband,
"did you ever read of the plague in London?" "No, I don't want to read it. It is enough to have a plague in my own house."

"I go for Texas," as the fellow said after he had stuffed his pockets with another man's money.

"Your invitation is too pressing," as the fly said to the spider when he goes out of his net, "and I don't like to have my friendship tied down."

"I have troops of friends," as the wounded officer said, when his own regiment rode over him at full speed in pursuit of the enemy.

"Most people like to be soaped," as the chap said when he pelted his neighbor with soapstones.

Scales derive their name from the fact that some people are rather 'scaly' about giving good weight.

Hottentots eat decayed whales, and some people grow fat on the faults of their neighbors.

Why was Benjamin Franklin the tyrant of the elements? Because he ruled the lightnings with a rod of iron.

The principal attending a thin high nose, is the risk it runs of getting balked by accident. It is great provocation to temperance, as it is easily skinned when the possessor blunders against a lamp post.

"No one would take you to be what you are," said an old fashioned gentleman the other day to a dandy who had more hair than brains.

"Why?" was the immediate reply.
"Because they can't see your ears!"

Keep out of the Doctor's Hands.—A porter carrying a load, by recent pushed against a physician. The gentleman was very angry, and going to strike him with his fist. "Pray don't use your precious hand, good sir, kick me and welcome. The bystanders asked what he meant. "Oh!" the porter replied, "he kicks me with his foot I shall recover; but if I once come under his hands, it will be all over with me."

A couple is a rose from which every lover plucks a leaf—the thorns are reserved for her future husband.

Interesting Experiments.—The most beautiful array of flowers may be produced by taking an elder stalk, punching out the pith, placing within the stalk a variety of seeds whose flowers blossom about the same time, and burying the stalk, and when blossoming it has various kinds of flowers, according to the seed planted in the stalk. This is a beautiful discovery, and well worth the experiment.

Set out Trees.—Don't neglect to set out one or two trees the first opportunity you find. Fostery will thank you for the benefaction, and obtain your memory with blessings when other more costly and magnificent mementoes, reared with ostentatious vanity, perhaps, and a view to the eulogium of posterity, shall have passed away.

Let the green tree wave at the cottage door,
The rose in the garden, and the laurel with its leafy wreath, memory dear,
When he tests in the quiet tomb.

Asparagus.—To improve the flavor of Asparagus, and make it more delicate and tender, spread salt over the beds in the spring. In addition to the value to Asparagus, salt is beneficial in destroying insects, and checks the growth of weeds, and checks the growth of others.
It is also a good manure to the land.

SANDS SARSAPARILLA.

FOR the removal and permanent cure of all diseases arising from an impure state of the blood, or habit of the system, viz: Scrophulous, or King's Evil, Rheumatism, Obstructione Catarrhus Vesiculae, Diabetes, Gonorrhoea, Pain, Itchiness, Ulcers, &c. &c.
Erysipelas, Ring Worm or Tetter, Scald Head, Ring Worm, &c. &c.
The BONES OF THE JOINTS, Sub-stantia Uterina, Syphilitic Symplics, &c. &c.
Lumbago, and Dysuria arising from an impure state of the Acetia, or Drooping Expansive or Impudence in Life. Also, Chronic Constitutional Disorders, will be removed by this Preparation.

If there be a pressure on earth which superior agents cannot enjoy, and one which they may almost every man the possession of, it is the power of resisting pain. How consolating, then, is the consciousness of having the instrument of curing the sufferer from misery to whom he possesses it. What an amount of suffering has been relieved, and what a still greater amount of suffering can be prevented, by the use of Sands's Sarsaparilla! The unfortunate victim of hereditary disease, with swollen glands, debility, and a general prostration, has been restored to health and vigor. The scrophulous patient, concocting his own poison, has been cured by the use of Sands's Sarsaparilla. The sufferer from gonorrhoea, who, loathing to himself, and to his attendants, has been cured by the use of Sands's Sarsaparilla, and many other complaints springing from a derangement of the secretory organs and the circulation of the blood, have been cured by the use of Sands's Sarsaparilla. The sufferer from dysuria, and now, with regenerated constitution, gladly testify to the efficacy of this inestimable preparation.

The following interesting case is presented, and the reader invited to its careful perusal. Comment on its merits is unnecessary.
NEW-YORK, July 25, 1844.

MR. S. S. GENTLEMAN—I consider it but just to express a fond hope for the success of his reference to the great benefit I have received, in the use of an obnoxious Sarsaparilla on my breast.
I was afflicted with a disease, the nature of which I do not know, but which was attended with severe pain, and which I had been unable to cure by the use of any other medicine. I had been suffering for several months, and was almost despairing, when I was advised to try Sands's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle, and used it according to the directions. In a few days I felt a great relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured. I have since used it several times, and have always found it to be a valuable and safe medicine. I can therefore recommend it to all who are afflicted with any of the diseases mentioned above, and who are unable to obtain relief by other means. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, J. W. W. GORDON.

It has also acquired much notoriety and celebrity by being known as Abell's Hotel, and with-
