REMOVAE.

Jos. W. L. Carty.

No class of our sellow citizens suffer greater oppression than females, whether as seamstresses or employees in our factories. The following is by Colesworthy, of the Portland Tribune :

FEMALE LABOR. From morning's dawn till evening's close, With weary heart and aching head, O God! how hard poor females work To gain their searty daily bread,
In rain or ambine—heat or cold.

They still are lingering at their task.
While lordly men who count their gold, In pride and gay luxuriance bask.

Poor women-see them tug and strive-No moment they can call their owa; Tis wonderful they thus survive, Since all the bliss of life has flown. They try to smile and pass away The time as pleasant as they can; O God of might! to thee we pray . For truth to melt the heart of man.

The rountless tears bet daily flow From whom earth's pampered lords oppress,
Tell of the aching hearts of woe,
Whom cone will succor—none will bless, Yet uncomplaining, they pursue Their various labors day by day, With no bright future in their view, To chase the shades of gloom away.

O, let the tear of pity fall, Ye men of wealth and power; O list Unto the wasting mother's call, And in the work of death desist. Relieve the burthens of the poor,
And succorall in need of pain,
This will for you that wealth scenre,
Which nought can take from you sgain.

MR. HOWELL Sir : Dr. Franklin favored us with a very important lesson, yet we al! do not see the force of it, until we feel it. The story of the whistle. You certainly recollect that I conveyed the idea of that simple yet important lesson to your mind, when you importuned me by the hour, for a eertificate approving of your instruments, teaching, &c. &c. Now, I still think you "paid too dear for the whistle." And if the strong, sincere, and friendly appeals I made to you on that occasion, to say nothing about the demonstration, and also the opinion of Mr. Caspar W. Weaver, so frankly and candidly expressed, and others that I have heard of, have not convinced you, I have lost all hope that even one from the dead would be believed by

Go shead—you may find boys whose ears may be tickled for a while; at least long enough to pay $10, but who will ultimately conclude, they have "paid too dear for the whistle." As to a Survey to be made together, as you propose, or a Survey made by you of one of mine, I think it perfectly useless. I don't say it is impossible to make a Survey with it, that might be right. I have known persons to guess successfully; but when there is a better way than guessing—cheap as it is—I would not advocate following it. Just so with the present question; there is a better way than please, to receive a liberal share of the Ladies' work. there is a better and surer way than yours to study Surveying and practise it. And may I not be astonished that you should doubt my opinion after saying as pretty things of me as you have, when I declare to you that I know it. Your's, &c.
