POETRY.

THE CRUSHED HEART. BY J. N. MATETTE. poor crush'd, bleeding heart, for these There is no bliss on earth, No star to light thy desiny, Nor love, nor smile, nor mirth A thick and heavy cloud is spread Upon thy once fair sky! While all thy hopes, now sear'd and dead, Within thy bosom lie.

Ab ! thus it is with life's short day, Ah! thus it is with life's short day.

From childhead's earliest hour;

The heart sor a reaks in agony,

And wither ke a flower;

The moon not soner lights the sky,

With heart a kindling ray,

ms of happiness die,

lay'd me best

Have long been in an hurch-yard laid,

With cleds upon their breast.

With clods upon their breast ; And not a scene their presence pheer'd, An hour they gave to me, But seems by contrast mere endear'd, To mock my misery.

The hopes I cherish'd with delight, Which youthful fancy years, To which I give my day, my night, My brightest, happiest years, Are scatter'd like the leaves that fall On Autum's dying bed, When Winter flings his vey pall On Nature's wither'd head.

Oh, poor crushed heart ! how oft it seems, As though the pulse had fled,
And all the low comantic dreams.
Were number with the dead!
The happy, blithesome hours long past,
That never will return

Upon the present—shadows cast, Like moonlight, on our urn. Oh that I had not been-noc known The beautiful and fair, That from this glorious world have flown, And left me to despair ! Oh that the lov'd, who still remain,

Had been as they—so pure— Then this poor heart could not complain, Nor death's dark presence woo. The morning's past-the noon hath come-The evening shades the sky; I'm tending to the lonely tomb— My wing is broken-spirits crush'd-

Poor heart, thou'rt torn and riven !

But all my woes will soon he hush'd,

In yonder calm, bright Heaven.

Those who are enjoying the good and his assistants, for clearing off the obciructions which impede the progress of the cars. Our friends up the Valley frequently grumble at this road when they lose the mails, but they bestow, very often, their 'cross words' and "sour looks" at the wrong company; as lately, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad has been at fault -not arriving at Harpers Ferry, at any thing like the time they are required to do, to connect with the Winchester Road. There are many deep excavations along the Winchester Road, and frequently these have been jammed up with drift snows, which no engines could plough through, and which had to be removed by the slow process of shovelling-yet, with all these obstructions, they have made pretty good time.

The last snow, however, impeded the progress of the cars several days, on account of the heavy drifts in the deep cuts along the road. The mails were carried from Winchester to Harpers Ferry in a sleigh, so that none were lost through any want of attention on the part of the Winhester Company.

We observe that the Senate of the State has passed the bill to amend the act establishing the Winchester and Potomac Railroad, authorizing an annuity of $5,-000 to be received in lieu of interest on debt and dividends on stock. The bill was strongly opposed by Mr. Witcher, and strenuously supported by Mesers. Gallaher, Stringer, Woolfolk, Crawford, and Thompson of A. The vote on the passage of the bill was 24 to 2.

Mr. A. S. Rhodes has opened a Hotel in Winchester, in the large house recently erected by Mr. Issac Paul, on Market street, which is quite convenient to the Railroad Depot. The House is furnished entirely with new furniture. beds and bedding, and as Mr. Rhodes has had some experience, we doubt not his table willbe supplied with the luxuries of the season, and his bar with choice liquors. His card will be found in advertising columns.

FINANCES OF MARYLAND.

A report from the Committee of Ways and Means of the Maryland Legislature, relative to the financial condition of the State, presents the fact, which must be gratifying to every man who honors state faith, that the means of a per manent and safe resumption of payments on account of the public debt are now at hand. By the estimates of the committee's Report it is shown that a surplus of about one hundred thousand dollars annually, over and above the annual interest of the debt and the expenses of the Government, may be relied on henceforth. There was a balance in the Treasury on the 1st | the great facilities he has for procuring the of December last of $158,257.

THE SPRING CAMPAIGN.

MESSAS. EDITORS :- The period being very near, when it has been usual to make a selection of two candidates for the Legislature, I ask permission that the mode of nomination by caucus convention be dispensed with, as in all respects highly objectionable, and under present circumstances at least, entirely unnecessary. This mode of nomination is at all times encumbered with serious objections. The greatest objection is, that it often does not afford a fair test of the popular will and choice, the selection of candidates being thus left at last to a few, who, if they be disposed, may act entirely to please and suit themselves, without due regard to what they may have ascertained to be the will of the people. This has happened and will happen again if this plan be pursued. In these caucus con ventions matters are very apt to be managed some ing of the influence excited in them by local jealousies, personal prejudices, and unfounded

There can be no excuse or reason for adopting this plan of nomination, that can be defend ed, for eyen if two political parties be arrayed with sword and buckler, rank and file, against each other, both can resort to the much more fair honest mode of nomination by the immediate voice of the people, assembled in primary or mass meeting. This plan of choosing candidates presents no objections, but a question arises, whether, under the circumstances that now prevail, it would not be proper and ind

From the Richmond Whig of Saturday

We announce this morning, with a sorrow which we have scarcely words to express, with an anguish in which this whole community, and he people of this entire Commonwealth will share, the death, the untimely death, of JOHN HAMPDEN PLEASANTS, Esq. late Senior Edtor of this paper. About two o'clock on yesterday morning, in perfect calmness and resignation, he yelded up his spirit to his God.

Upon the melancholy circumstances which have led to this heart-rending result, we need not say a word. They are familiar to every mind. They require no comment. So sudden, so appalling has been the stroke, that we can even now scarcely realize the diendful truth. We are in a measure stupified; we know not how to believe it possible. Yet, alas! it is too true! he hand which has so often tested upon the table where we sit, and wielded a mighty power out the surposes of a few leaders, to say noth- fession, implicating several others not over the public mind; which, in thoughts that breathed' and 'words that burned,' has enchained thousands of admiring hearts, is now cold and motionless! A gifted son of genius has been stricken down in the mid heaven of his cureer. John Hampden Pleasants is no more!

Mr. Pleasants was the eldest son of the lafa James Pleasants, a former Governor of Virgispring of 1824, he established the Richmond Whig, and devoted to it ten years of the most BIENNIAL SESSIONS - A bill has passed unwearied labor, before it yielded him even a living compensation. Since that period, the paper became the organ of the Whig party, and made its way to popular favor and a reasonable patronage. A more powerful and brilliant pen than that of Mr. P., has never been enlisted in the editorial ranks of this country. A more ais efforts were devoted, never breathed the breath of life. A more true, gallant and generous spirit never dwelt in a human breast. Honest, straightforward, full of impulse, he looked at the right, and never counted consequences: Jas. McDowell (Ex-Governor of Virginia,) he trampled under foot with noble scorn all of his manly heart. Mr. Pleasants would have been 49 years of age, some time in March. He has left an aged mother, two children, several sisters, two brothers, and a large circle of devoted relatives and friends, to lament his loss. . Our despest symputhies are with his bereaved household; with the helpless orphans, so early cast, without a pro-GENTLEMEN: I arrived in your city tector, upon a bleak and cheerless world : with the grey-haired mother, from whose trembling hands has been torn the staff, with which she sustained her footsteps down the vale of years. cerely mourn. So has ended the earthly career of the gifted, the high-minded, the generous, whole-souled John Hampden Pleasants! The Richmond Times says :-"As exaggerated reports would doubtless find their way into journals at a distance, we deem it proper to state simply, that a personal rencontre took place on the Manchester side of the river, between Mr. John Hampden Pleasants and Mr. Thomas Ritchie, Jr. The former received five wounds-viz: in his arm, shoulder, upper part of the left breast, left hand, and upper and inner part of the thigh."

Mr. Ritchie in company with two friends. Messes. W. Greenhow, and R. Scott, Jr., repaired to the designated spot, and arrived first. Mr. Pleasants with his friends Messrs. Deane and Archer shortly after arrived. Mr. Pleasants was armed with two long rifle pistols and a sword cape, Mr. Ritchie with two patent revolving six sants immediately advanced on Mr. Ritchie, who stood his ground, with his pistols levelled when within range, Mr. R. commenced discharging. Mr. P. although wounded had not yet fired, but continued to advance; when quite near he discharged his pistol at Mr. R. without effect; tinged effectually to parry the efforts of Mr. full meeting if practicable is desired.
