POETRY. THE FORGET-ME-NOT.

Go at moonlight's dreary hour,

Where the silvery ripples shine; Mark a little, lovely flower; Be that lovely floweret thine. Mild as heaven's own blue, it beameth

Like a clear and cloudless day ; Image of true love, it seems th To the heart sweet words to say.

And methinks its blue eyes glisten, Full of love and tender thought, While from far it whispers [listen ? " O forget, firget me not "

For as I watch the distant sky

That glows with many a star,

I think of that dear friend on high,

Who from this world have flown,

And with the ransomed heavenly host,

And that bright world afar.

Ifthink of all the loved, the lost,

Surround the Father's throne.

Oft Fancy waves her magic wand,

And 'mid the shades of night,

Those dear ones from the spirit land

Will greet my ravished sight-

Or as the zephyr's voice I hear,

For some remembered tone.

Some voice that here forever still,

Joins in the joyous songs that swell

the conflict terminated. The following particulars we find in a letter to the St. Louis Republican:

It was a cool-blooded butchery of women and children, in the absence of all the warriors of the village. On the night of the 12th and 13th, the letter states, a war party of Yancton Sioux Indians de feated and destroyed fourteen tribes of the Omaha tribe of Indians, located at the time at Wood's Bluffs, situated about sixty miles from this place-Belleview .-The men and warriors of the Omahas had -because he regarded his place and po-spousibility of the war upon the Presi- left the camp on a hunt; and the Sioux, soon after they reached the camp, discovnineteen mortally .wounded. It commenced in the Bowling Saloon attached to the Neptune House, kept by Mr. Leonard Allen, in Haverhill street, north side, and owing to a strong westerly wind, blowing hard at troops from regulars to volunteers, was rejected. the time, one of the most extensive conflagrations ensued which has been known there for many years. The Mercantile Journal states that nearly all of the buildngs destroyed were of wood, mostly workshops and stables, though some tenements were burned, and about seventy families were rendered houseless. On most of the buildings and stock there was but little insurance.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

The business of Congress last week was not of any special interest. Day ofter day was consumed in speaking, and Congress will find all the pasiness upon them at the heel of the session.

There was a spicy debate in the SENATE on the 19th, between Messrs. Calhoun, Berrien and Benton-the latter gentleman being the principal beiligerent. There was nothing personal in the controversy, but something pointed and pun-Committee (on Military Affairs) to report back a bili granting Bounty Lapes to the officers of the volunteer corps, as well as the soldiers in

In the House, Mr. Bell, of Kentucky, made a capital speech on the land bounty bill, in which he dealt some hard and just blows against the Administration and its party in the matter of the war with Mexico.

Mr. STARKWEATHER, of Ohio, made a respectble partizan speech on the other side. Mr. CHARLES J. INGERSOLL made a characteristic speech about printing an old report of his
