RICHMOND, March 23, 1847. The Senate yesterday cleared its table of all the business likely to be acted upon at the present session, and this day will be occupied in arranging amendments and in examining and signing enrolled bilis-no very light duty, when it is considered that not less than one hundred are yet in transits.

The Senate yesterday passed the bill incorporating the Berryville and Charlestown Turnpike Company, with a subscription of $9,260. The vote was 10 to 7. Also, a bill to incorporate the Moorefield and North Branch Toropike Company, with a subscription of two fifths.

The bill authorizing the Shepherdstown and Smithfield Turnpike Company to extend their Road to Winchester, was passed fate in the evening. Also, a bill concerning the Sheriff of Clarke County-refunding $69 damages.

A bill to incorporate a company to construct a Bridge acress the Potomac at the Point of Rocks was passed by the Senate. A supplementary bill was passed, to the act

SENOR ATOCHA. - The mission of this personage to Mexico, is another instance of the bad luck that attends the diplomatic mysteries of the President. Senor Atocha is not a Mexican but a Spaniard -Having resided some years in Mexico, he contrived to make himself, in some way, a claimant on the Government for a large sum and, as others have done, came to the United States, and got himself naturalized for the sake of enforcing his claim under the protection of the Union. Having kept up a certain degree of intimacy with Santa Anna and Almonte, he was selected by the President to open or continue some negociations of a pacific tendency with those noted gentlemen, and, it he could have got to speak with them might have effected something. But unluckily Senor Gomez Farias, who loves nei her Santa Anna nor President Polk. was shrewd enough to be suspicious of Senor Atocha, and when the latter arrived at Vera Cruz, orders were given not to let him approach the city of Mexico, and to keep an eye upon him until he should reembark for the United States.
