FOR LOCOFOCO DIGESTION.

If the Whigs who exercise freedom of speech in declaring that the war with Mexico might have been honorably avoided, and that it has been conducted at an immense expense of blood and treasure, are guilty of "moral treason," are not the Locos, who believe in the war, and its authors, guilty of practical treason in standing back when the country needs their services?

If it is wrong in the Whigs to talk against th war, and yet many of them embark in it, is it not criminal in the Locos to hold off, and use no oth-weapons than big words? Would it not be much more patriotic, if the follow them to Mexico, than to remain at home scolding like old women?
