SPEECH

JOHN A. THOMSON, E.q., of Jefferson, On the Bill to incorporate the Lynchburg and Southwestern Railroad Company.

In the House of Delegates of Va, March 9th., 1818.1

MR. THOMPSON said that the question before the House was one of great importance in all its aspects. The extent of the road-its length being two hundred and forty miles-and the amount to be expended-were considerations to be well weighed, and every one who votes upon this bill will be held by his constituents to a strict rom-Reid, the Loco candidate for Governor, accountability. He would not be deterred, it was has a gain thus far of 1940, as compared with the true, by such considerations in the prosecution of Governor's vote in 1944, when Graham, Whig, internal improvements, if he deemed them judicious, and likely to be successful, and he would INDIANA .- The returns for the Liegislature are vote for this work if he could see the results that its patrons claim for it. But he could not see them. On the other hand, whilst he was satisfied that the work would cost vastly more than was estimated-$10,000 per mile-he was fully and clearly of opinion that it would not answet to Congress-a Whig gain. S. T. Logan, Whig. the paramount purpose of every work of internal improvement-that of bringing the products of the State to market, whether the product of the soil or the mines. He was aware that large calculations were made upon the travel of the Southren States, and the toll to be received of passertgers ; but, before indulging in speculations of that kind, he would again say, that the first question When y.-Good to prime Wheat was sold at with him would be the capacity and adaptation H. of the work, to develope the resources of the State and to transport its products. For one, he should look to these objects, and to the permanent and solid prosperity of the State, and be was unwilling to regard it as a mere Arabian desert, where, ke Beden ns, they were to levy tribute upon way-

The first question then to be examined is, will the road transport the produce of the farmers, and of those valuable mines of gypsum, salt, lead and iron, which are said to abound in the Southwestern counties ? This is the question, and it is to be determined by no figures of speech and flights of fancy, but by practical experience, and and Duplin have been heard from, which give down-right arithmetic and cyphering. Mere a Locofoco loss of 477 as compared with the flourishes about "iron rivers" will not answer the vote in 1811. This is rather more cheering to the purpose-are not to be relied upon.
