WHO CAN SHE BE!

BY NED BUNTLINE.

"Dulce, will you go to the masquerade ball, to night?" said I to my lesser half on a bright evening, during the gayest part of the carnival season in Cuba. "No, my armor," answered she: Il this evening: don't go to night, but stay W. S. Hopkins. by my side and let your cheering presence had thrown over my face, yet a kind of blu-

"Madame, you know that I have made up my mind to go out in my new cabellero's dress; you are not very ill, and I shall be dull company for you if disappointment holds a berth in my mind. You had better consent to my going : I will return early." "Do as you please sir," she responded, poutingly; "but if you neglect me thus in the first year of our marriage, how shall I be treated when Time's shadow shall darken my brow, and dim the light of my eyes when my spirits may droop, and my beauty fade before the wintry frosts of age?"

To shorten my yarn, reader, I rigged myself and went, my heart beating a "consciencetattoo" against its easing all the way, for well I marked the soft reproach which my wife's full dark eye spoke when I left her side. Having arrived at the ball room, I mingled with the gay maskers, listened to the music and in the sparkling wine glass sought for excitement; yet that perpetual drumstick of conscience kept thumping against the parchment head of reflection, and I could not feel nappy possible, I sought and danced with the fairest maidens in the throng; yet still, Thought, that nettle in Life's garden, kept Joy in a distant offing, and pleasure far in my wake. I was about to give up the chase for Enjoyment, and dutifully made up my mind to return home and moor pryself alongside of my little wife when a fair hand was laid gently upon my arm, and a tremulous, musical voice asked me, in a whisper, to retire a little from the crowd. The hand was delicate, and seemed even smaller than my wife's, and the taper fingers were encircled by rings of rare value, such as could only be worn by the rich and titled. She was closely veiled in black; yet I caught one glance of eyelight through the thick crape. In the blackness of mometa open and permit a star to glance with supernatural orightness down on the agitated orean; and even so fell that which, when it falls upon the ear, vibrates along every nerve until it reaches the heartstrings, where it echoes and re-echoes, till

I followed the stranger's invitation, I gazed on the fairy form which flitted be-Tore me, I forgot my invalid at home. The "Mask" was but little if any larger than my wife; yet there was a fullness and elegance of figure, a grace and voluptuousness of motion in the former which I had never observed in the latter. My wife had beautifully soft, glossy curls of jet, but they could never compare with the black tresses of twining silk, which hung nearly to the feet of my charmer. When we had got clear of the throng she again spoke: "Are you a gentleman-one on whom a lady may in all honor depend!" I answered that to the best of my knowledge and belief I was, and thought I might

Again she showed marks of impatience and excitement, as if some trouble rested on he mind. This I pressed her to reveal offering every aid in my power to defend her, or ever to avenge past wrongs. I besought her to have confidence in my affection, new-fledge though it was, and to test its strength

I began also to think of my poor invalid wife; and these thoughts, coupled with my fear of berrayal, by the aid of a little more solitude would have conquered me and sent home, but at this critical moment, the "returned, hearing in her hands a rounck veil. The carriage started off with speed-indeed, the driver seemed urging his horses to a rapid gallop. Our road was long, for this speed we must have ridden for two hours, some of the time over rangh, rocky roads, and then along another ways, when at last the panting animals were brought to a stand.

"opeak not a word, whatever you may hear-attempt not to raise the veil, or your life and mine may be the forfeit!" whispered my fair guide-and while she spoke I felt that she trembled from head to foot. Her hand was cold as ice, and her impetous voice stifled and husky. Before we advanced from the carriage, she also made me vow by all the saints in heaven, never to reveal what I might do or see in that night's adventure. She then led me cautiously on, apparently through a large garden, for the cool night breeze bore the perfame of orange, citron, pink, lemon and spice blossoms to my cheek. We soon arrived at another door, which creaked lustily as it was opened before us, and then our way seemed up a winding stone stair case, through a passage so still, so solemnly silent that it even echoed the light foot-fall of my companion, while my own heavy tread rang like groans in a cavern.

through the still damp air. Until now the lady had not spoken since we stepped from the volunte-but as we arrived at the top of the stairs, and passed into a warmer atmosphere, she whispered that the hour to test my courage had arrived .--We stepped across a soft carpet, and she seated me on a vielding cushion. I could see nothing through the thick isliness in the darkness before me, convinced me that I was in a lighted room. No sound could I hear, save the suppressed breathing of my trembling companion, and the beating of my own heart. After remaining for a few moments on the ottoman, which shook from her nervousness. she again addressed me : "You are armed with pistol and dagger ?

"I am," said I, inwardly praying that I might have no occasion to use them. "You will please give me those weapons, "Ah !" thought I, "I am betrayed, and she asks my weapons of defence that I may become an easy prey !"

"Let me ask," said I, "your reasons for this strange request ?"

She paused a moment and seemed to be schooling herself to some dreadful task .-Again she addressed me.

How true this conjecture is, we cannot say; but there can hardly be a doubt but a wild woman has inhabited the Navidad Mustang bottoms, near Texana, for many years. It cannot be a negro, male or female, because the track forbids the conclusion .-We incline to think it a Mexican woman.

I would have greatly preferred to postpone making any report, until all the examinations and calculations are completed, and comparisons of the relative cost of improvements, of different capacities instituted, necessary to the preparation of a full and detailed one, upon all the questions refer red to my consideration. But as there seems to be a wish to have the general conclusions and resules, thus far arrived at, communicated to the Board of Public Works, I am unwilling to laterpose any objection.

When I accepted the appointment from your board to conduct this survey, it was understood that my duties as chief engineer of the Coesapeake and Onio Canal would not allow me to give much personal attention to its prosecution in the field, but that the planning of the improvement and the estimate of its cost should receive my most careful consultation. And, at my request, I was a to engage the services of an assistant, in a life confide, to take the an assistant, in w. If cound confide, otake the immediate charge of the survey, and carry out such instructs to time give in relation.

Coyle, Esq., were the secured as assistant. The manner to the duties as such, has the duties as such, has the mand highly creditable to him.

The survey was commenced on the 19th lane.

The survey was commenced on the 19th June last. The field operations were completed on the 12th December. Since then, calculations for married-does so-sends a notice of the fact with the estimate have been making, and maps of the of improving the Shenandoah and its branches, and the propable cost of effecting such an improvement. When commencing the survey it was my intention to visit the party sufficiently often to enable me, in advance of its movements, to examine the river, and give from time to time particular instructions in regard to the prosecution of the survey. This course was pursued in relation to the examination of the river from Harpers-Ferry to the head of Little's Falls, and above, and lo some considerable distance below, Port Republic. But finding that I had not the time at command that a continuance of this course of proceeding along the whole river would require, I concluded, as Mr. Coyle understood the general plan of the examination I desired to have made, to wait until the survey was completed, and then to examine carefully the lines traced to determine where and to what extent changes, if any, might be advisable. This revision of the location I have yet in part to make, but it will be accomplished before closing my final report. Notwithstanding this is the case, the results now presented may be substantially relied upon. Changes, no doubt, both of plan and location, will be found advisable upon revising the line. It would be singular if it were not so. It is only after much examination of the ground with the level, often on bothat such an river, and laborious calculationsed in this report improvement and improvement and finally located. But as such sliding, it may be safely assumed that, in the aggregate, they will not tend to increase the estimate. Besides report, it may to the estimate present at least one half of the work which was carefully laid in a safe place a to de marked the improvement would be of a kind, cost of which, in the aggregate, cannot be materially exceed by any changes of location.

For instance, the enore fall of the river must be overcome by locks, no matter what their position my be, individually, or how great may be the change of good quantum from that now assumed-ment, per cubic yard, may therefore be estimate who great certainty. The surveys and examinations made were of the Shenandosh, from its mouth at Harpers Ferry, to the Forks," and of the South lork, from thence up to Port Republic, and the North tork, to the turnpike near Strasburg, and of the North river from Pert Republic to Mount Crawford. From the Shenandoah outlet lock in the Chesapeake and Onio Canal, directly opposite to the mouth of the Shenandeals, as far up as to Fort Republic, an approximate location was made of time, and for the same reason the survey and examination of the North fork extended no further than the turnpike near Strasburg, and the val eys of the South and Middle rivers were left wholly uneramined. I will sow briefly state the facts arrived at from the surveys and examinations made, and the results up to this time obtained from the subsequent calculations.

2d. The mode of improvement best suited to the Shenandoah and its brance, all things con-sidered, and unquestionably the conray opinion, a mixed one. An independent, is, in throughout, would be a very expensive improvment, and a continuous slackwater, in conse quence of the injury it would occasion to the bottom lands, apart from its great cost, as not to be thought of. A mixed improvement, by canal in part and slackwater in part, changing from one to the other, as the one or the other would be the cheaper, is well suited to the Shenandoah, and can be so arranged as to do 1 .ss injury to the bottom lands than any other in provement that could be adopted.

3d. The improvement, I am of opinion, should be of a capacity that would accommodate boats of about 30 tons burden. One sufficient for boats much exceeding that burden, would cost greatly more than the estimate given below. On the other hand, one of much smaller capacity might be constructed for considerably less noney. regret exceedingly that circumstances. I require a report to be made, before the que relative to the most suitable capacity for an provement of the Shenandyah can be fully a horouguly investigated. I have taken sc. pains to get information of the amount of ton-nage that would probably pass over an improveent of the capacity of that recommended, and have come to the conclusion that it would be suf-Ecient to justify the construction of the work In tt s I may be in error, but shall be prepared to speak more definitely and satisfactorily upon the subject in my final report. 4th. A mixed improvement from the mouth of the Shapsadarh to Part Remblie for thirty-top boats, would, from an estimate i have made, based upon calculations not yet entirely completed, cost two millions of dollars, exclusive of land damages. These damages, as the property, generally, along the river would be ennanced in value by the improvement, I do not think ought, and if any arrangements with the proprietors should be made in advance of undertaking its construction, most probably would not amount to much. I me two millions as the estimate. The amount, delay from my calculations, is a lew thousand 1 prefer to but in a preliminary report like this, The estimate and numbers. vance upon the present that there will be an ad-

And if this she be effected, there would be a very handsome ving upon the estimate. Many of the dams, of which there are a great number upon the river, could be made of but little use in the construction of any improvement that could be adopted, arising either from their insufficient height of their imperiect construction-Several of the proprietors of these dams are under obligations to keep open sluices in them for the present navigation, and some of them, I unrstand, may be compelled to put in locks, if required to do so by the New Shenandonh compa ny. Now, as the proposed improvement wo give these proprietors a better head of water, in nearly all cases a more permanent and tig dam than they now have, it is not unreas to suppose that arrangements might betewith the most if not all of them, that wo

FINE PICTURES.

We feel justified in calling attention to the advertisement of Mr. Lyern, who takes very fine Daguerreoty pe Portraits. His specimens indicate great skill in his profession, and as he remains but a short time, persons desirous of preserving some memorial of their features should not lose the opportunity of being painted with the pencil of light.

CHARLESTOWN AND BERRYVILLE TURNPIKE.

We are indebted to the vigilance of our Represen tatives for the subscription of an additional fifth to the stock of this Company-making in all the sum of $10,800. Surely, there will now be no hesitation in pushing the work forward. The notice of Mr. Lackland, the Treasurer, will not, we hope, be overlooked. The present season should not be permitted to pass without the construction of the Road. Let our men of enterprise now go ahead.

VIRGINIA AHEAD.

We notice an act recently passed, incorporating "The Jefferson County Steel and File Manufacturing Company." We believe, notwithstanding the sneers that "Virginia is behind the age," this is the first Company in the whole Union, who have undertaken or are about to undertake this branch of manufacture. This Factory is to be located on the Shenandoah River, or at Harpers-Ferry. We also understand that Mr. Rothery, at Located-J. Wesley Osborn, Wm. F. Mercer. whose instance the Company was chartered, Next Baltimore Annual Conference, to be is a most skilful and experienced workman. [Spirit of Jefferson.

We join in the expression of pleasure at the progress of the manufacturing spirit in this County, and wish ample success to all concerned. A Steel Factory was commenced at Richmond some years since, and though unfortunate, is about to be revived.

On these accounts, the people of this city, though seven-eighths of them are | Ere this home she Whigs, and are justly entitled, under any administration, to a Whig Postmaster, and though the Chief Clerk (a Whig) is a most accomplished officer and a very popular man, and performing the labours is entitled to the pay, yet the people made no effort against Col. B.'s re-appointment. Many of them, on the contrary, advised his re appointment, and all that we have heard of, acquiesce in it. There was not a single applicant for the place, in opposition to him !! How different is this conduct on the part of . Whig President and Whig people from that pursued four years ago, by President and Demogratic people! Then Gen Peyton's qualifications were acknowledged to be of the highest character :- but he was not a Democrat, and therefore Mr. Polk declared that he could not re-appoint him.-Richmond Whig.

Caution is the Parent of Safety. HOW often do we see persons afflicted with a slight Cough and Cold, who go on neglecting it until it settles on their langs, wid brings on AN AT-TACK of PULMONARY CONSUMPTION, which may eventually cause their death; when, if they had procured a bottle of Hance's Compound Syrup of Hearhound, in the beginning, they never would have experienced any ill results from their cough, but have been cured of any httesdate; Therefore, ill dose who are troubled with a slight cough, will recolect that delays are dangerous: for what may appear trivial in the beginning, may lead to the most dreadful consequences. Harre's Compound Syrup of Hoarhound may be used by persons in the most delicate state of heath, with perfect safety, mild.
