

WEEKLY

CHARLESTOWN, JEFFERSON COUNTY, VIRGINIA,

PUBLISHED WEEKLY,

BY JOHN S. & H. N. GALLAGER.

VOL. 42.

THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 19, 1849.

NO. 26.

Life Insurance.

THE subscriber, agent for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia is now prepared to receive applications for insurance on lives; it is on the mutual system without liability beyond the amount of premiums. All profits are divided annually among the insured. The company is organized on a basis of security and safety, and has a large number of proprietors of the Company, which fully explain the mode of operation, advantages, safety of the institution and rules of premium which will be happily furnished to any who may feel an interest in the subject.

JAMES J. MILLER,
Charleston, July 19, 1849.

CORTLAND & CO.

203 Baltimore Street, Light St. BALTIMORE, Md.

Importers of ENGLISH, FRENCH & GERMAN FANCY AND ETABLE GOODS. FAMILY HARDWARE, TABLE CUTLERY, TEA, COFFEE AND SPICES, PLATED WARE, BRASS AND COPPER WARE, AND ALL THE HOUSEHOLD REQUISITES.

OLD and young will find it greatly to their advantage to call on our establishment. We are doing the most complete assortment from the continent. Kitchen utensils to the most perfect order. We are also doing all kinds of repairing and alterations in all kinds of household goods. We are also doing all kinds of alterations in all kinds of household goods. We are also doing all kinds of alterations in all kinds of household goods.

COSTUME HALL.

SPRING AND SUMMER CLOTHING!

WOLFE AND RETAIL

Costs of every article, guaranteeing all the latest styles, and of an improved cut and make, from 75 cts. to 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 10, and upwards.

PANTALOONS. Double breasted, 25 cts. to 1, 1.50, 1.75, 2.00, and upwards. Fashionable style, the Luminous stripe, as low as 2, 3, 5, 8, 10, and upwards.

VESTS. Vests of every variety, comprising Silk, Satin, Cashmere, Merino, Valencia, from 50 cts. to 75 cts., 1, 1.50, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 10, and upwards.

BOYS' CLOTHING. Always on hand the largest and best assortment of Boys' Clothing ever offered in this city.

A wholesale assortment of CLOTHS and CASIMERS of the best make, together with a large and handsome variety of SILK and MARSEILLE YACHTING, which are sold at the lowest prices, and in the most handsome manner, 50 per cent. less than the accustomed prices, and in all cases a beautiful fit guaranteed.

AT COSTUME HALL,
Corner of Pratt Street and Central Market Space,
H. H. COLE,
Baltimore, March 29, 1849—1y.

Builders, This Way!

THE undersigned informs the citizens of Jefferson County, and the surrounding counties, that he still continues the CARPENTRY BUSINESS in all its branches. He has on hand a large stock of all kinds of lumber, and is prepared to furnish to any kind of work pertaining to the building of houses, barns, and other structures, and is prepared to do all kinds of carpentry work, and is prepared to do all kinds of carpentry work, and is prepared to do all kinds of carpentry work.

THE MOST EXTENSIVE

Shirt Establishment
In the United States is at No. 179 Baltimore Street, Baltimore, Md.

Where 500 persons are employed, and a stock of 1,000 shirts are constantly on hand.

MERCHANTS and others residing in Baltimore are invited to call and examine the largest and best stock of SHIRTS that has ever been offered in this city. The shirts are made of the finest quality of cotton, and are of the most fashionable style, and are of the most durable quality.

WM. H. BROWN & CO.,
Baltimore, March 8, 1849—1y.

Boating and Commission Business.

THE subscribers having boats constantly running to and from Alexandria, and are prepared to receive passengers and freight, and are prepared to do all kinds of boating business, and are prepared to do all kinds of boating business.

Coal Manufactory.

HAVE now on hand, at my Coal and Harrow Factory, on the Potomac River, a large quantity of the best quality of coal, and are prepared to do all kinds of coal business, and are prepared to do all kinds of coal business.

CARRIAGES.

of every description, which will be sold very cheap for cash on a month of 12 months.

AMONGST the many articles of Carriages, are the following: Single Roadways, Double Roadways, Gig Roadways, Sulkies, and all the latest styles of Carriages, and are prepared to do all kinds of carriage business, and are prepared to do all kinds of carriage business.

JORDAN'S FREDERICK White Sulphur Springs, Frederick County, Virginia.

SITUATED five miles East of Winchester, and one mile from the Potomac Railroad, it is now open for the reception of company.

This Water is the only one in the State, and it holds in solution Sulphuretted Hydrogen, Iodine and Magnesia, imparting tone to the system, and acting as a powerful diuretic, a stimulant, and a tonic. It has been found to be the best remedy for all kinds of diseases, and is now being used by thousands of people.

BRANCH JORDAN, Proprietor.
July 5, 1849.

Shenandoah Springs, Frederick County, Virginia.

THE Proprietor of the Shenandoah Springs, Frederick County, Virginia, is now open for the reception of company.

This Water is the only one in the State, and it holds in solution Sulphuretted Hydrogen, Iodine and Magnesia, imparting tone to the system, and acting as a powerful diuretic, a stimulant, and a tonic. It has been found to be the best remedy for all kinds of diseases, and is now being used by thousands of people.

JOHN J. ABELL,
Shenandoah Springs, June 7, 1849.

Berkeley Springs, Va.

THE house of the undersigned is now ready to receive company.

This Water is the only one in the State, and it holds in solution Sulphuretted Hydrogen, Iodine and Magnesia, imparting tone to the system, and acting as a powerful diuretic, a stimulant, and a tonic. It has been found to be the best remedy for all kinds of diseases, and is now being used by thousands of people.

JOHN J. ABELL,
Berkeley Springs, June 7, 1849.

Rheumatic and Nervous Affections.

THE undersigned is now ready to receive company.

This Water is the only one in the State, and it holds in solution Sulphuretted Hydrogen, Iodine and Magnesia, imparting tone to the system, and acting as a powerful diuretic, a stimulant, and a tonic. It has been found to be the best remedy for all kinds of diseases, and is now being used by thousands of people.

JOHN J. ABELL,
Berkeley Springs, June 7, 1849.

Attorney at Law.

STEPHENSON, JEFFERSON CO., VIRGINIA.

OFFICE on the corner of the father's residence.
[Aug. 31, 1848.]

JAMES HUSKERY, ATTORNEY AT LAW.

Practises in the County and Superior Courts of Jefferson, Berkeley, Morgan and Frederick Counties.
[Feb. 5, 1849—1y.]

J. BRWIN SMITH, WHOLESALE DRUGGIST.

No. 122 Pratt Street, Baltimore.

HAS constantly on hand a large assortment of DRUGS, PAINTS, OILS, DYE STUFFS, WINDOW GLASS, VARNISH, BRUSHES, &c., &c.

all of which he will sell at the lowest rates, and respectfully invites all to give him a call before purchasing elsewhere.

Wholesale and Retail Merchants, and Druggists, will find it to their interest to call and examine the quality and prices of our articles before buying in any other place.

Baltimore, March 29, 1849—1y.

W. S. HOPKINS, OREM & HOPKINS, Merchant Tailors, and Wholesale Dealers.

IN Cloth, Cassimere, Vestings, and Tailors' Trimmings.
No. 130 Baltimore St., N. W. corner of Chertoff's, Baltimore, Md.

A large assortment of READY-MADE CLOTHING, of superior quality.

One Price Only.

Cloth worn by stairs—entrance, south end of Chertoff's, Baltimore, Md.

February 29, 1849—1y.

UNITED STATES HOTEL, HARPER'S FERRY, VA.

THE undersigned has leased the Hotel at Harper's Ferry, (in the occupancy of Capt. Joseph F. Anza), known as the United States Hotel, and is now prepared to accommodate passengers by the Railroad, or travellers, in the most comfortable manner.

There is a dining room, where every fruit of the season, and luxury that can be had will be served up in the most choice style.

Also, a billiard table, and a billiard room, which he would say, that his House shall always be open for their reception and accommodation, and is determined to ensure their call agreeable, and to contain the best provisions and attended by attentive waiters.

Give the House a call, and judge of its merits for yourselves.

JAMES DATE WAGER,
Harper's Ferry, April 18, 1849.

COAL AND WOOD STOVES.

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory.

THE subscriber has just returned from Baltimore with a large and carefully selected assortment of the various styles and descriptions of stoves.

Parlor Wood and Coal Stoves, Ten Plate & Cooking do.

All complete, and of the most approved patterns, which he offers at prices less than ever before offered in this town.

Also, a lot of COAL GRATES, in various patterns, and of the best quality. These he would do well to give me a call before purchasing elsewhere, as my arrangements are such that I can receive in a few days any order for Stoves not found among my present assortment.

Tin and Sheet Iron Ware.

THE subscriber has just returned from Baltimore with a large and carefully selected assortment of the various styles and descriptions of stoves.

Parlor Wood and Coal Stoves, Ten Plate & Cooking do.

All complete, and of the most approved patterns, which he offers at prices less than ever before offered in this town.

Also, a lot of COAL GRATES, in various patterns, and of the best quality. These he would do well to give me a call before purchasing elsewhere, as my arrangements are such that I can receive in a few days any order for Stoves not found among my present assortment.

Tin and Sheet Iron Ware.

POETRY.

TRUE LOVELINESS.

She who thinks a noble heart
Better than a golden crown,
Honors virtue more than art,
Through his less in fashion seen—
When she deems that inward grace
Far surpasses outward show—
She who values less the eye
Than that which the soul can throw—
Whose'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me!

She who knows the heart requires
Something more than lips of dew—
That when love's brief rose expires,
Love itself will die with too—
Whose'er her fortune be,
She's the bride—the wife—for me!

THRILLING SKETCH.

A PRINTER AMONG THE WOLVES.

The Wolf has been a favorite theme for the brain and pen of the poet and novelist. His haunts and his habits have been described by him with as much minuteness as if he belonged to one of the human rather than the bestial race. And truly his is an enviable fame. A coward, except when driven by the stern tyrant hunger—merciless and unyielding as the hyena, he lacks the noble daring and generosity of the lion as much as the beauty of the tiger and leopard. There is nothing romantic in the associations of his name, except tales of fearful carnage, his howl evokes a sense of terror, fright and horror. Lord Byron and Gen. Putnam have made him famous; however, the one has immortalized him in Mazerpa, the other proved him mortal in his den. Byron's was a fancy picture—"old Put saw him eye to eye."—And they only can have an adequate idea of him who have seen him in his den, and heard his cries of hunger, howling through his bank jaws from his maculose stomach in unearthly howls, while his eye-balls glisten demoniac through the midnight gloom. Then, when far from home, houseless, succorless, with the shades of night gathering around you, and gathering with them these Cannibalistic howls, howling a song of terror, fright and horror. Lord Byron and Gen. Putnam have made him famous; however, the one has immortalized him in Mazerpa, the other proved him mortal in his den. Byron's was a fancy picture—"old Put saw him eye to eye."—And they only can have an adequate idea of him who have seen him in his den, and heard his cries of hunger, howling through his bank jaws from his maculose stomach in unearthly howls, while his eye-balls glisten demoniac through the midnight gloom. Then, when far from home, houseless, succorless, with the shades of night gathering around you, and gathering with them these Cannibalistic howls, howling a song of terror, fright and horror.

THE SECRET FOUND OUT.

The following is an extract from an Address, delivered on the occasion of a banquet given to Miss Rouse, a Division of Sons of Temperance in Georgia:

"As a lady, I might perhaps complain, that by your organization, you exclude us from the secrets of your Order. You group yourselves together—you talk—you play—you do. No listening ear of woman is there to catch the eye to make your deeds, all as secret as your thoughts. But in spite of your secret will, out and to the light you come. You talk and play—but we see the young man, who just now, by his devotion to his cup, was wrecking all of good for time and all of hope for eternity, in the association of your order—and then the wife whose nothing but long greivous looks upon his sin thus saved, and a smile, radiant with the light of joy, plays brightly on the old man's face."

THE SECRET FOUND OUT.

The following is an extract from an Address, delivered on the occasion of a banquet given to Miss Rouse, a Division of Sons of Temperance in Georgia:

"As a lady, I might perhaps complain, that by your organization, you exclude us from the secrets of your Order. You group yourselves together—you talk—you play—you do. No listening ear of woman is there to catch the eye to make your deeds, all as secret as your thoughts. But in spite of your secret will, out and to the light you come. You talk and play—but we see the young man, who just now, by his devotion to his cup, was wrecking all of good for time and all of hope for eternity, in the association of your order—and then the wife whose nothing but long greivous looks upon his sin thus saved, and a smile, radiant with the light of joy, plays brightly on the old man's face."

THE SECRET FOUND OUT.

The following is an extract from an Address, delivered on the occasion of a banquet given to Miss Rouse, a Division of Sons of Temperance in Georgia:

"As a lady, I might perhaps complain, that by your organization, you exclude us from the secrets of your Order. You group yourselves together—you talk—you play—you do. No listening ear of woman is there to catch the eye to make your deeds, all as secret as your thoughts. But in spite of your secret will, out and to the light you come. You talk and play—but we see the young man, who just now, by his devotion to his cup, was wrecking all of good for time and all of hope for eternity, in the association of your order—and then the wife whose nothing but long greivous looks upon his sin thus saved, and a smile, radiant with the light of joy, plays brightly on the old man's face."

THE SECRET FOUND OUT.

The following is an extract from an Address, delivered on the occasion of a banquet given to Miss Rouse, a Division of Sons of Temperance in Georgia:

"As a lady, I might perhaps complain, that by your organization, you exclude us from the secrets of your Order. You group yourselves together—you talk—you play—you do. No listening ear of woman is there to catch the eye to make your deeds, all as secret as your thoughts. But in spite of your secret will, out and to the light you come. You talk and play—but we see the young man, who just now, by his devotion to his cup, was wrecking all of good for time and all of hope for eternity, in the association of your order—and then the wife whose nothing but long greivous looks upon his sin thus saved, and a smile, radiant with the light of joy, plays brightly on the old man's face."

THE SECRET FOUND OUT.

The following is an extract from an Address, delivered on the occasion of a banquet given to Miss Rouse, a Division of Sons of Temperance in Georgia:

"As a lady, I might perhaps complain, that by your organization, you exclude us from the secrets of your Order. You group yourselves together—you talk—you play—you do. No listening ear of woman is there to catch the eye to make your deeds, all as secret as your thoughts. But in spite of your secret will, out and to the light you come. You talk and play—but we see the young man, who just now, by his devotion to his cup, was wrecking all of good for time and all of hope for eternity, in the association of your order—and then the wife whose nothing but long greivous looks upon his sin thus saved, and a smile, radiant with the light of joy, plays brightly on the old man's face."

THE SECRET FOUND OUT.

The following is an extract from an Address, delivered on the occasion of a banquet given to Miss Rouse, a Division of Sons of Temperance in Georgia:

"As a lady, I might perhaps complain, that by your organization, you exclude us from the secrets of your Order. You group yourselves together—you talk—you play—you do. No listening ear of woman is there to catch the eye to make your deeds, all as secret as your thoughts. But in spite of your secret will, out and to the light you come. You talk and play—but we see the young man, who just now, by his devotion to his cup, was wrecking all of good for time and all of hope for eternity, in the association of your order—and then the wife whose nothing but long greivous looks upon his sin thus saved, and a smile, radiant with the light of joy, plays brightly on the old man's face."

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

SPORTING WITH FEMALE AFFECTIONS.

A man cannot make a more perilous part, Than one who trusts to his own wit to obtain A confidence in order to deceive.

Honesty and integrity ought to be the leading principle in every transaction in life. These are virtues highly requisite, notwithstanding they are too frequently disregarded. Whatever pursuits individuals are in quest of, sincerity in profession, steadfastness in engagements, are indispensably incumbent—A man of honest integrity and uprightness in his dealings with his fellow creatures, are sure to gain the confidence and applause of all good men; while he who acts from dishonest and designing principles, obtains deserved contempt. Dishonest proceedings, in your own eyes, are more offensive to, and unbecomingly to, the eyes of others, than in trivial, but much more so in consequential affairs. The most perfect uprightness is highly requisite between man and man, though it is too often disregarded, and is much more so between the sexes. Every profession of regard should be without dissimulation, every promise preserved inviolate, and every engagement faithfully discharged. No one ought to make any offers or pretensions to a lady before he is in a great measure certain her person, her temper, her qualifications, suit his circumstances, and agree perfectly with his own temper and way of thinking. For a similarity of mind and manners is very necessary to render the bonds of love permanent, and those of marriage happy.

"Marriage, the happiest state of life would be, if it were only joined where hearts agree."

The man of uprightness and integrity of heart, will not only observe the beauties of the mind, the goodness of the heart, and the dignity of station, and the delicacy of wit, but will strive to fix his affections on such permanent endowments, before he pledges faith to any lady.

He looks upon marriage as a business of the greatest importance in life, and a change of condition that cannot be undertaken with too much reverence and deliberation. Therefore he will not undertake it at random, but he should precipitately involve himself in the greatest difficulties. He wishes to act a conscientious part, and consequently cannot think, (notwithstanding it is too much countenanced by custom) of sporting with the affections of the fair sex, nor even of paying his addresses to anyone till he is perfectly convinced his own choice is the best principle.

All imaginable exertions are necessarily beforehand, but after a man's profession of regard and kind services and solicitations have made an impression on a female heart, it is no longer a matter of indifference whether he perseveres in, or breaks off his engagement. When the matter is brought to such a point, he should be prudent, and should manifestly disturb the quiet and tranquility of mind. Whether marriage has been expressly promised or not, it is of little significance. For if he has solicited and obtained her affections, on supposition that he intended to marry her, the contract is, in the sight of heaven, as binding as if he had actually done so. He should be true to the man who has imposed on the honest heart of an unsuspecting female, and, after winning her affection by the prevailing rhetoric of courtship, ungenerously to leave her to bitter sorrow and complaining, acts a very dishonorable part, and is more heinous than open force, and money must not be put in competition with happiness.

MORAL CHARACTER.

There is nothing which adds so much to the beauty and power of man as a good moral character. It is his true glory, his influence—his life. It dignifies him in every station—exalts him in every condition, and glorifies him at every period of his life. Such a character is more to be desired than every thing else on earth. It makes a man free and independent. No servitude—no crocheting—no profligate—no treacherous honor-seeker ever bore such a character. It purifies every truth and righteousness after springing in such a person. If young men but knew how much a good character would dignify and exalt them—how glorious it would make their prospects, even in this life; never should we find them yielding to the grovelling and base passions of human nature.

MORAL CHARACTER.

There is nothing which adds so much to the beauty and power of man as a good moral character. It is his true glory, his influence—his life. It dignifies him in every station—exalts him in every condition, and glorifies him at every period of his life. Such a character is more to be desired than every thing else on earth. It makes a man free and independent. No servitude—no crocheting—no profligate—no treacherous honor-seeker ever bore such a character. It purifies every truth and righteousness after springing in such a person. If young men but knew how much a good character would dignify and exalt them—how glorious it would make their prospects, even in this life; never should we find them yielding to the grovelling and base passions of human nature.

MORAL CHARACTER.

There is nothing which adds so much to the beauty and power of man as a good moral character. It is his true glory, his influence—his life. It dignifies him in every station—exalts him in every condition, and glorifies him at every period of his life. Such a character is more to be desired than every thing else on earth. It makes a man free and independent. No servitude—no crocheting—no profligate—no treacherous honor-seeker ever bore such a character. It purifies every truth and righteousness after springing in such a person. If young men but knew how much a good character would dignify and exalt them—how glorious it would make their prospects, even in this life; never should we find them yielding to the grovelling and base passions of human nature.

MORAL CHARACTER.

There is nothing which adds so much to the beauty and power of man as a good moral character. It is his true glory, his influence—his life. It dignifies him in

