THURSDAY MORNING.

NOVEMBER 27, 1866.

THE APPROACHING SESSION.

Members of Congress are already at the Metropolitan, and during the week the greater portion of them will be in attendance.

There is no reason to anticipate an exciting session, as there is nothing now to be gained by turmoil and strife.

Among the prominent subjects of consideration, the Pacific Rail Road may be set down as likely to engage a large share of attention.

The committee of Mr. Buchanan to that scheme, as altogether constitutional and expedient, will give new life to the subject.

There are various other local schemes in embryo; and it remains to be seen whether the immediate Democracy will continue to give way to the public domain without regard to the effect upon the interests of old settlers whose cases have been deferred or neglected.

The starting fact has been stated that the Central Illinois Rail Road will have twenty millions of dollars worth of land after the construction of their work.

Of this pile Senator Douglas reserves a large share. The friends of the people know how to help themelves first of all.

There should be some method of ascertaining how members of Congress are directly or indirectly interested in the mammoth schemes now pending.

All this may be deemed a specimen of all that foggy, but the public domain shall not be squandered without a warning note, however feeble the sound of the bugle.

Several of the newspapers having referred to the late Senator Clayton as the oldest member of the Senate at the time of his death, the National Intelligencer refers to the record and corrects the statement.

It accordingly appears that Mr. CLAYTON of Kentucky, has been the longest in service, having taken his seat in 1817.

His central times reigned the place of Senator, thereby showing that his participation in the public councils was more in substance to the wishes of his constituents than to an indulgence of his own ambition.

Mr. FRANCES of Maryland is next in point of seniority, having entered in 1821, and now being in his third term, which will end in 1861.

Our own Senators, Messrs. MAW and HENRY, did not enter the Senate until 1847, though both had been in the House of Representatives and had previous legislative experience.

They now occupy very prominent positions, the first named being chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and the latter chairman of the Committee on Finance.

Senator CAS has only been a portion of his term in the Senate, having resigned his place in 1845 after being nominated for the Presidency. His present term will end on the 30th of March next, and, although we could point out many objections, to his somewhat time-serving policy, yet, on the whole, we regard that he is to leave the Senate.

His other eminent members of the Senate, such as Mr. BELL of Tennessee, Mr. SEWARD of New York, Mr. BUTLER of South Carolina, and Mr. HORTON of Texas, have not completed their terms of service. No person who has ever observed the nature and progress of legislative business can fail to admit the importance and advantage of experience, as well to command influence in the Senate as with the people. This may account for the power usually wielded by Southern Senators and Representatives.

Their constituents give them time to achieve and sustain a national reputation.

Whit in Baltimore, a few days ago, we visited the establishment of these gentlemen, on Baltimore street. From appearance the house does as large a business as any other wholesale Dry Goods establishment in Baltimore.

Mr. J. A. BAKER, of Shepherdstown, rode four miles through the rain on the day of the late Presidential election to vote for Fillmore. The same gentleman voted for George Washington for the Presidency.

Mr. DAVID H. STREIBER, of Martinsburg, the Paris Correspondent of the Virginia Illustrated, in Harper's Magazine, is now on a tour through southwestern Virginia, to add new papers and sketches to that interesting series.

WANTED TIME.

We very often hear persons complaining of a "want of time" to read and study, or to devote to the improvement of their minds.

Such an excuse proceeds generally from a "want of disposition," and not from a want of time, and if these ordinary persons would look a little deeper into the real cause, they would find it so.

There is no one who does not have at least three hours out of the twenty-four for reading.

Twenty-four hours constitute a day and night; twelve hours are enough for any individual, male or female, to devote to manual labor.

When it comes to field labor, ten hours are enough, and to hold that a man who works when he does work, can perform a week's work in a day.

How is this superfluous time to be disposed of? We have performed our day's labor, taken our recreation, and still have time for something more.

Let them consider, that although the Creator has made a difference, yet education is the principal thing which makes one man superior to another.

COUNTRY LIFE.

We envy—no that's not the word; envy is wrong and heart-aching, we often indulge in longing for the calm retreat, and quiet, satisfying joys, of country life.

Your real prize, as a farmer would have it, is the power of something over a perspective of the fact by some of our North, which he holds in fee simple of his own grant, or somebody's lawyer's deed.
