POETICAL.

VIRGINIA.

Double the life of what you live, and A man's a man, and a woman's a woman, There are Virginians, and there are The bold and the valiant, and the Loyal, and the true, and the Loving, and the kind, and the Puritan, and the Puritanical,
The good, the great, the wise,
The learned, the eloquent, the Loyal, the true, the Loving, and the kind, and the
Puritan, and the Puritanical,
A woman, a woman,
A man, a man, a man.

For as the world goes round,
From west to east, from north to south,
The good, the great, the wise,
The learned, the eloquent, the
Loyal, the true, the
Loving, and the kind, and the
Puritan, and the Puritanical,
A woman, a woman,
A man, a man, a man.

For as the world goes round,
From west to east, from north to south,
The good, the great, the wise,
The learned, the eloquent, the
Loyal, the true, the
Loving, and the kind, and the
Puritan, and the Puritanical,
A woman, a woman,
A man, a man, a man.

THE VOICE OF THE WHANG DOODLE.

A "whang doodle" had shell preacher, Wound up a dlinning sermon with this magnificent oration:

"My brother and sister! of a man's full of religion you can't hurt him! There was three Arabian children, they put 'em in a fiery furnace, heated seven times hotter than it could get, and it didn't singe a hair on their heads! And there was Job of the Evangel, they put him—and where do you think brothering and sistering, they put him? Why, they put him into a cedarlon-of bilin' life and biled him all night, and didn't fuz his shell! And there was Dan!, they put him into a lion's den—and what,
my fellow-travellers, and respett' animalries, do you know what Dan did? He made a den for I. Why, for just three times a day. Don't be alarmed, brothering and sisters! I don't think any of you will ever get into a lion's den!"—Harp's Magazine.

Mr. W. learned that Alexander Earle, Esq., was nominated by the Democratic Convention in which, it is said, at Berkeley, on Saturday last, as a candidate for the House of Delegates.

A MAN WITHOUT MONEY.

A gentleman some sixty miles below N.
Orleans, was accosted by a stranger.
"Sir, have you any money about you?"

"Yes," was the reply, "I always make it a point to carry some money with me, more or less."

"Well," rejoined the stranger, "I wish to go across the river, the fare is ten cents.
Would you please to accommodate me with that sum?"

The gentleman putting on a look of well affected surprise, replied, "Sir, do you mean to say that you have no money?"

"Yes, Sir, I haven't a cent," rejoined the stranger.

"Well, if you had the attorney, if you haven't got any money, why play the lawyer, and when you come to the bar, and call for the strong drink, or whatever it is you want."

The stranger, putting on a look of well
affected surprise, replied, "Sir, do you
