POETICAL.

Wearing of the Green. The following is the celebrated song which created such intense excitement throughout Great Britain, and for the incorporation of which in his piece, Mr. Bourgeois's play of "Arab at Pagan" had to be withdrawn from the London stage:

Oh! Paddy, dear, and did you hear The news that's going round, Blood that they have shed, You may take the Shamrock from your hat And cast it on the sod;

But if at last the color should Be torn from Ireland's heart, The sons from shame and sorrow from The dear old soil will part.

Falling Leaves. Watching the falling leaves, watching the falling leaves, Gold, flaming red, and russet brown, Fall in a duttering shower down; such light if they express the hope that your Excellency will be guided in your determination by the illustrious examples of those nations and those rulers, the record of whose power is written in the golden letters of magnanimity and mercy.

Watching the falling leaves, watching the falling leaves, Gold, flaming red, and russet brown, Sink to lie in their earthly bed, And whispering "men, too, like us must fall"

Watching the falling leaves, watching the falling leaves, Gold, flaming red, and russet brown, Sink to lie in their earthly bed, And whispering "men, too, like us must fall"

Watching the falling leaves, watching the falling leaves, Gold, flaming red, and russet brown, Sink to lie in their earthly bed, And whispering "men, too, like us must fall"

Mrs. Coleman then continued: You have our petition before you, and we beg to add a few remarks. Mr. President, almost every act of your administration has been marked by wisdom and moderation.

Now, in the evening of life—no, that is past, in the night of life—it must be dark night with him to the end. There is but one single solace left him—the loving presence of his wife and children.

Now he is a poor old man, and, in addition to all he has endured, he must bear about with him always the bitter consciousness of defeat. A great mind like yours can appreciate that trial.

Travel Between Baltimore and the West. The Baltimore and Ohio Rail Road Company put its new schedule into effect on Monday week, and we learn that it is successfully working in its much improved facilities for the travel between the East and West by our city.

For the first time since the Road has been open to Wheeling, we believe it has now three through first-class trains in each direction between Baltimore and Washington and Wheeling and Parkersburg, with prompt and close connections at the two latter points, and at Benwood to and from all portions of the West, through the agency of the Central Ohio, the Marietta, and the Cleveland and Wheeling Roads, with their affliating lines.

The Baltimore and Ohio Line, therefore, at a high mark, with the large increase of facilities and the decidedly superior advantages which it thus presents for passenger travel. By its rapid improvement in double track, the rebuilding, in permanent iron work, the many bridges of a temporary nature that had been destroyed during the war, the addition of more than fifty new and superior passenger cars, and some thirty locomotives, adapted to high speed for passenger service, the Line has fitted itself for assuming at once a first-class position as a great through route for passengers, as fully as it had already proven itself for many years as a successful and prompt carrier of freights.

Our advertising columns will show the hours of departure of the trains, which seem to be well adapted to the public wants, starting for the West at 8 15 A. M., and 2 and 8 40 P. M. daily. The 2 P. M. train is an entirely new addition to the usual advantages of the Road, and, running at increased speed, is called the "Cincinnati Express Train"—its passengers being due at that point at 6 o'clock on the day after leaving Baltimore, or in twenty-eight hours only from our city to the Queen City of the West.

From Cincinnati the corresponding train departs at 6 A. M., daily, and is due at Baltimore about 10 A. M. on the following day—being only twenty-eight hours in the easterly direction.

One of the other trains is called the "Baltimore and St. Louis Express," but the third, or morning train, also makes admirable connections, both for St. Louis and Cincinnati, as well as Chicago and the Northwest, and Louisville, Nashville and Memphis on the Southwest.

It is a matter of no small importance to our community, and to the largely increased travel between Washington and the Great West, that such enlarged advantages should be presented by our leading railway line, and the improvement thus presented is hailed by us with much satisfaction and with every wish for its abundant success.—Balt. American.

A Practical Joke. A good joke is told of a Judge in New Hampshire. He always kept a demijohn of good Jamaica, in his private office for his particular friends. The Judge had noticed for sometime that on Monday morning his Jamaica was considerably lighter than he had left it on Saturday night. Another fact had established itself in his mind. His son Sam was missing from the parental pew in church on Sundays.

One Sunday afternoon Sam came in and went up stairs heavily, when the Judge put the question pointedly to him: "Sam, where have you been?" "To church, sir," was the prompt reply. "What church, Sam?" "Second Methodist, sir."

"Had a good sermon, Sam?" "Very powerful, sir; it quite staggered me." The next Sunday the son came home rather earlier than usual, and apparently not so much under the weather. His father hailed him with: "Well, Sam, been to the Second Methodist again to day?" "Yes, Sir."

"Good sermon, my boy?" "Fact was, father, I couldn't get in; the church was shut up and a ticket on the door." "Sorry, Sam; but keep going; you may get good by it."

Sam says that on going to the office for his usual refreshments he found the "John" was empty, and bearing the following label: "There will be no service here to-day; the church is temporarily closed."

An Important Table. We publish below a carefully revised table, showing the value of one dollar in gold, as compared with Confederate Treasury notes, in each month during the war, from May, 1861, to 1st April, 1865. This table has been prepared by the well-known and long established banking-house of W. B. Isaacs & Co. of Richmond, and may be relied upon as entirely correct.

Morning Memories. I love to go far back in thought, And wander all around, The dear old place where first we met; On God's blessed, hallowed ground.

In our bright childhood; where the shades Of morning filled the hours, And hope's soft smile so brightly burned, Above heart buds and flowers.

Gray clouds have gathered o'er that morn; Sweet blossoms have been blown, By cold, bleak winds, from life's rose tree, And left the thorns alone!

The vase that held the brilliant blooms Of childhood has been broken, But round it still hangs rose perfume, And memory holds the token.

Deferred Articles. Missouri. Gov. Fletcher, states in his Message to the Legislature now in session, the total amount of State bonds issued to railroads, including bonds guaranteed by the State, at $28,700,000, on which the unpaid interest to January next will be $6,316,000.

The total (Union) war debt of the State amounts to a little over twelve millions, for the payment of which the Governor hopes Congress will provide. He recommends the sale of certain railroads, on the ground that private enterprise can better finish them.

Missouri has great resources, and it is thought that under the free system these will be thoroughly developed.

Gen. Washington's Will. The manuscript will of General Washington was sold at auction at the Fair in Philadelphia, Jay Cooke, the banker, gave $1000 for it. In this will, written by himself, 9th July, 1790, he desired that his body should be interred in a private manner, without parade or funeral oration.

[Congress, however, did not regard this, for Richard Henry Lee delivered, by appointment, a most eloquent and appropriate tribute. One of the finest eulogiums of President Adams' pen was the announcement to Congress of the death of the venerated chief.]

The General provided for the emancipation, upon the death of his wife, of all the slaves which he held in his own right; and for the support of the aged and infirm, and infants.—A regular and permanent fund was established for their support.

Sound Advice. The following is from a speech of General Howard, Commissioner of Freedmen, delivered at Savannah recently to the negroes:

He notified them that the military would, in all probability, soon be removed, and that they must then look to the white residents for counsel and protection, until laws were passed securing them the full enjoyment of all their rights as freemen. He assured them that he did not believe that the great mass of Southern people were unfriendly to them, but that they were prepared to treat them kindly and honestly, if the colored people would meet them half way. He did not believe that the whites had the least desire to oppress them, and he urged them to stay in the neighborhood where they were, and to show by their good conduct and habits of industry that they were worthy of their freedom.

He advised them that they should strenuously not to resort to the cities, as they could not support themselves there, and would suffer for the necessary comforts of life.

The Whistler.

"You have heard," said a youth to his sweetheart, who stood by a corn sheaf at daylight's decline...

"And what would you do with it? Tell me," she said, while an arch smile played over her beautiful face...

"I would blow it," said the youth, "and the charm would bring me a third time an exquisite bliss..."

"Yet once more would I blow, and the music flying would bring me a third time an exquisite bliss..."

The maiden laughed out in her innocent glee—"What a fool of yourself with the whistle you'd make!"

At Harper's Ferry, the otherday, Sir Morton Peto and his fellow-capitalist from England excavated an old fellow from one of the cellars in the town...

A Cleptomaniac and one of his elderly parishioners were walking home from church one frosty day lately, when the old gentleman slipped and fell on his back...

A Hymn-writer of the Chicago Post describes how he got out of a bad scrape in the Police Court, in the following manner:

"The next morning the Judge of the Court sent for me. I went down and he received me cordially. Said he had heard of the wonderful things I had accomplished at Bryan Hall...

The Mobile News says an artist in that city painted a dog so natural that the animal and the hydrophobic during the hot weather...

An old settler, bragging to a new comer of the grazing land in his neighborhood, says it "yields two pounds of tallow to every square foot..."

"Well, Sambo, how do you like your new place?" "O, berry well, massa. You see missus broiled tree eggs for herself, and gimme de broiled."

A FATHER of many children says that the reason why babies always cry after waking from sleep, is because they are mad at themselves for having given their parents a few moments of quiet.

A Boy entered a stationary store, the other day, and asked the proprietor what kind of pens he sold. "All kinds," was the reply.

A SKEWED little fellow, who had just begun to read Latin, astonished the master by the following translation: "Vir, a man; gin, a trap—cyrin, man-trap."

Biddy, while on a begging expedition, was asked by a lady if she had any children. "Yes, mum," replied Biddy, with great readiness, "I'm the mother of an orphan."

An old lady wants to know, if the compass has a needle of thirty pence, how long it would take a woman with such a needle to make a shirt.

Some scolding batchelor says it is much joy when you first get married but it is much more jany after a year or so.

Why are the flowers on a lady's bonnet like Whalers? Because they are "arter-fish-ile."

WOMAN is said to be a mere delusion, but it is something pleasant to hug delusions.

Why is playing chess a more exemplary occupation than playing cards? Because you play at chess with two bishops, and at cards with four knaves.

"Have you said your prayers, John?" said a doting mother to her obedient little son. "No, ma'am. It ain't my work; Bill says the prayers, and I the amens. We agreed to do it, because it comes shorter."

The best dowry to advance the marriage of a young lady, is to have in her contempane mildness, in her speech wisdom, and in her behavior modesty.
